WOMAN VICTIM IN STRANGEST DEATH PUZZLE

Miss Florence Copeland, Wealthy Sunday School Teacher, Slain in Her Own Home. State Police Take Up Case.

MANSFIELD, Sept. 19.—State Officer Arthur B. Hodges of Taunton arrived here at noon to take charge of the investigation into the tragic death of Miss Florence Copeland, the rich Sunday School worker, whose body was found in the parlor of her North State street home on Wednesday.

After a thorough search of the house in company with Deputy Sheriff Nelson Mr. Hodges declared that Miss Copeland was undoubtedly murdered.

"All the indications point to the commission of a crime," he said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "There is no apparent motive, however. I cannot say more until I have questioned the persons who saw a suspicious looking man near the house on Wednesday."

Medical Examiner Charles S. Hudson this afternoon gave out a statement in which he said he was also convinced that the woman was slain.

"The bloodclot on the brain could not have been the result of a fall, in my opinion," he said. "It was caused by a blow, and a blow more severe than would have been received by a simple fall to the floor or by striking on furniture in falling.

Felled by Blow.

"Miss Copeland was unconscious from the moment she was struck. There is little data upon which to make headway in our examination, but we shall do our utmost to solve this mystery."

Officer Hodges came here in response to a call by District Attorney James M. Swift of Fall River for State police assistance.

He learned facts to-day which led him to conclude that Miss Copeland was slain either by a burglar or by an insane man.

The facts were communicated to him by Medical Examiner Charles S. Hudson of Attleboro. Dr. Hudson is positive that the woman's death could not have been due to an accident or natural causes, as at first supposed. He is positive that the blugeon wound in her head caused the cerebral hemorrhage that killed her. He is positive that this wound was caused by a weapon.

Seek Strange Man.

Chief Whitney of the State police wired back to District Attorney Swift that, although his department was pressed for help, he would send a man to Mansfield to-day.

While this correspondence was going on between the chief of the State police and the district attorney, Mr. Hodges, who is now working on the case were given startling information by two neighbors of Miss Copeland, which has started them out in search of a mysterious man.

This man was discovered, muttering to himself, in the vicinity of the Copeland house two hours before the woman's body was found.

These deputies—who are equally positive Miss Copeland was murdered—are Thomas Nelson of Mansfield and John H. Nerney of Attleboro.

"We are very anxious to find this mysterious man," said Deputy Sheriff Nelson to-day. "The story has been told us by two reputable citizens, and neither knew of the story told by the other. It was only after the peculiar death of Miss Copeland began to assume the appearance of a tragedy that these citizens came to us with their information.

"The stories agree perfectly.

"We have nothing else to work upon but this one clew. That Miss Copeland was struck down by someone she encountered in the library of her home is the theory on which we are working."

Miss Copeland's funeral was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The mysterious man sought is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, dark complexion, has a black moustache, wore black clothes and a black derby.

The authorities agree that this man saw Miss Copeland before she had discovered his presence, and that, fearing detection, he struck her on the head with a blunt weapon from behind and escaped.

One of the most significant discoveries was the fact that the bulkhead doors were thrown back. Miss Copeland was always careful about the doors, and especially the bulkhead, for she was frightly alone all day.

When found unconscious the front door was locked, but the side door leading to the cellar from the yard and from Main street by the front wing of the house was unlocked, but unfastened.

An intruder might have left through the dining room or the bulkhead.

NEWTON CITY OFFICIAL A SUICIDE BY HANGING

City Engineer Irving T. Farnham of Newton committed suicide to-day by hanging himself in the cellar of his home at No 90 Warwick road, West Newton. The body was discovered by members of the family. No reason is known for the deed. He was thirty-nine years old, a graduate of Cornell Engineering School and had been city engineer of Newton since 1900.

LARNED IS PICKED TO BEAT OLYMPIC CHAMP

LONGWOOD TENNIS COURTS, Sept. 19.—It was a distinguished gallery which surrounded the syivan courts when the final matches in the International tennis matches got under way to settle the question of who should be challengers for the Davis cup, now held by Australia, the teams of America and Great Britain battling for the honor.

With the tournament standing in favor of the Americans two to one it was only necessary to win one of the two singles matches on the card, and it looked a sure victory for America.

W. A. Larned, the American singles champion, faced Major Ritchie, the Olympic champion, who had previously defeated Reuie Wright, the other American representative of America, while Parke, the Irish champion, crossed racquets with Wright.

It was put down as a certainty, barring any reversal of form, that Larned would defeat Ritchie and thereby clinch the international contest, and it was hoped that Wright would defeat Parke, who had shown much cleverness in all his playing.

KILLED ON CROSSING AT EAST CAMBRIDGE

While attempting to cross the Boston & Maine tracks at Water street, East Cambridge, early to-day, an unidentified man was struck by an inward bound express train and instantly killed. He was about forty-five years old. The body is at Litchfield's undertaking rooms.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—Game to the core, notwithstanding their actual lack of yesterday, the Chicago Cubs came back at the Phillies to-day in a double-header, The Football hope of Manager Chance and his men is that they will take both games while the New York Giants lose to the Pirates. That will put the league race on more even heels.

The Cubs haven't by any means given up hope of winning the flag. They figure that McGraw's men are due for a slump, that Mathewson alone cannot do all the pitching, and that the other Giant twirlers will get their bumps from now on.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Hayden fouled to Bransfield. Zimmerman died on Grant's throw to first. Schulte died to Osborne. NO RUNS.

Grant tripled to left. Knabe was thrown out by Tinker. Titus hit a sacrifice fly to Schulte, scoring Grant. Clement beat out a bunt, Bransfield doubled to left. Osborne flied to Schulte. ONE RUN.

SECOND INNING.

Chance fanned. Steinfeldt was thrown out by Corridon. Titus got Hofman's fly right close to the right field fence. NO RUNS.

Courtney flied to Hayden. Doolin flied to Howard. Corridon singled and died stealing, Kling to Zimmerman. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Tinker flied to Titus. Kling was safe on Bransfield's wild throw to Corridon, who covered first. Corridon was singled. Hayden forced Brown, Knabe to Grant. Howard batted for Zimmerman and beat out a single, scoring Kling. Schulte was caught off the bag and run down, Courtney, Bransfield, Doolin to Grant. ONE RUN.

Hofman went to second and Howard to third on Schulte's single and went to second on Knabe's sacrifice, Brown to Chance. Howard tripled, scoring on Grant. Clement fanned, Bransfield died to Schulte. ONE RUN.

FOURTH INNING.

Schulte singled and died stealing. Corridon to Bransfield to Grant. Chance fanned. Steinfeldt walked and died stealing, Doolin to Knabe. NO RUNS.

SOUTH END BASEBALL GROUNDS, Sept. 19.—The Cincinnati Reds had sufficiently recovered from their strenuous efforts in running the bases yesterday to be able to take part in to-day's game against the Doves. To be sure they were somewhat up weary and it took them some time to limber up before the game, but on the whole they looked in fairly good shape when the gong rang for the festivities to begin.

Manager Ganzel had some more kid pitchers he wanted to try out and a big bunch of them warmed up under the critical eye of the veteran. Harry O'Toole, the Brockton spitball artist, practiced with the Reds, but he will not go in the box until Monday, when a big delegation of his friends will be on hand to root for him.

Manager Kelley wanted to get that defeat back, so he relied on his veteran pitchers to deliver the goods. Both teams were packed with minor leaguers in a combination of the trimmings.

The weather was delightful and the crowd was in fair proportions considering the circumstances.

AMERICAN LEAGUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Cleveland, Sept. 19.—The Red Sox came on the field this afternoon full of determination to win the last game of the series with the Naps. Losing two games running was bad enough, but to go through one contest without a safe hit worried the Red Sox more than anything else. The ball player certainly loves his base hit and when he don't get it he grows moody.

There was much handling of bats by the visitors as they sat on the bench. They would pick up one piece of ash, heft it, squint along the edge, throw it down and pick up another. Evidently there was to be a slaughter.

In the meantime Berger, Llobhardt and the other Nap twirlers warmed up without casting a glance at the visitors' bench.

There was a big crowd on hand. Cleveland fans believe the Naps will win the pennant for the first time on record, and they are giving Lajoie's men all the encouragement possible.

Deacon McGuire was out in a Cleveland uniform again, coaching the pitchers. He was tickled to death over the two defeats administered to the Red Sox.

TRIED TO EXTORT REWARD FOR PURSE

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Michael Vincent Darcy was arrested in the Chicago postoffice on a charge of an attempt to obtain $25 by false pretense from H. N. Taylor, No. 50 Stratford place, president of the General Wilmington Coal Company. Mrs. Taylor lost a gold purse and her husband advertised to recover it. He received a letter from Darcy which said he had found the purse and if the owner would forward $25 he would mail it to her. He had not found the purse.

THIRTY-SIX FREE TOURS OF EUROPE FOR TEACHERS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will send the thirty-six most popular SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS in Boston and Suburbs on free European tours.

These tours w...

IRELAND,
SCOTLAND,
ENGLAND,
FRANCE,
BELGIUM,
GERMANY,
HOLLAND,
SWITZERLAND,
ITALY.

For the purpose of this tour-plan, Boston and the suburban territory have been divided into NINE districts.

FOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS will be sent from EACH DISTRICT.

The nine districts are as follows:

District 1—Milton, Quincy, Hyde Park.
District 2—Newton, Brookline.
District 3—Waltham, Watertown.
District 4—Malden, Medford, Melrose.
District 5—Woburn, Winchester, Stoneham.
District 6—Everett, Revere, Chelsea.
District 7—Cambridge.
District 8—Somerville.
District 9—Boston.

This makes four tours for each of the Nine Districts or thirty-six tours in all.

The four teachers in each district who receive the highest number of votes in the contest will be sent on the four tours for their respective districts.

These tours will last about seven weeks. Under ordinary sailing arrangements this will give every teacher thirty days in Europe.

All expenses will be paid. These tours are FREE.

"Expenses paid" means that the teachers will have free of charge first-class cabins in the best transatlantic steamers, accommodations at the best hotels in Great Britain and on the Continent, private carriages for sight-seeing, first-class steamers on the Rhine and on the Italian lakes, best guides and couriers for the trip and such comforts as are suitable to a first-class tour.

Every candidate for these unusual opportunities for seeing the world must be a BONA-FIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

Every candidate must be certified to as a bona-fide Sunday School teacher by the pastor of the church with which the teacher's Sunday School is connected.

Full details of the tours, with lists of cities to be visited, famous sights to be seen, and all further information, will be printed in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

Blank ballots will be printed in the EVENING and the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Each ballot in the EVENING AMERICAN will count as one vote.

Each ballot in the SUNDAY AMERICAN will count as ten votes.

In order to prevent the purchase of AMERICANS solely for the ballots a plan has been arranged by which teachers may obtain votes and at the same time send the SUNDAY AMERICAN to friends.

It has been customary in these competitions for contestants to buy papers at wholesale rates from newsdealers, cut out the coupons and throw the papers away. In this contest you get your votes at better than wholesale rates, while you are also given the privilege of getting papers for future delivery, which also will include ballots.

The Additional Ballots.

Those who wish to avoid the collecting of large numbers of ballots and to take advantage at the same time of the plan for increasing the ratio of votes, can purchase ballots in accordance with the schedule printed herewith.

Such contestants must send their money to this office, with the names and addresses of the people whom they wish to receive the SUNDAY AMERICAN. This office will turn the business over to the newsdealer. This entitles the contestant not only to the votes in the accompanying table, but secures the SUNDAY AMERICAN for the number of Sundays indicated in the table. The SUNDAY AMERICAN will be left at the addresses given by the regular newsdealer in the neighborhood.

These papers for future delivery will be delivered to any person or persons you may name. Not less than four consecutive papers will be sent to any one address.

FOUR papers thus ordered are good for FIFTY votes and will be sent to one address for four Sundays.

EIGHT papers thus ordered are good for 108 votes and will be sent to one address for eight Sundays or two addresses for four Sundays.

TWELVE papers thus ordered are good for 175 votes, and will be sent to one address for twelve Sundays, two addresses for six Sundays, or four addresses for three Sundays.

SIXTEEN papers thus ordered are good for 265 votes, and will be sent to one address for sixteen Sundays, two addresses for eight Sundays, or four addresses for four Sundays.

The ballot in the EVENING AMERICAN is good for ONE vote.

The ballot in the SUNDAY AMERICAN is good for TEN votes.

REDMOND AND PARTY VISIT ARCHBISHOP

Irish Leaders Then Attend Great Field Day at the Baseball Grounds.

After being entertained at a special luncheon by the Twentieth Century Club at its quarters on Joy street this noon, John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, and his two co-delegates to the United Irish League convention, Joseph Devlin, M. P., of Belfast, and Chairman John Fitzgibbon of the Roscommon County Council, this afternoon, called, by special invitation, on Archbishop O'Connell at the archepiscopal residence.

Accompanying the trio of guests to the Twentieth Century Club and thence to the Archbishop's dwelling was T. B. Fitzpatrick, private secretary to the Archbishop and national treasurer of the United Irish League.

After the greetings the Archbishop and the delegates from Erin all proceeded to the Huntington avenue baseball grounds, where the monster field day was in progress which was arranged as part of the United Irish league celebration. Messrs. Redmond, Fitzgibbon and Devlin are scheduled to speak at the baseball grounds at 8 o'clock this evening.

The luncheon at the Twentieth Century Club was attended by 150 members and guests. At the head table with the club president, the Rev. Charles M. Dole, were Messrs. Redmond, Fitzgibbons and Devlin, Treasurer Fitzgibbon, President Bernard J. Rothwell of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Ryerson Ritchie, executive head of the Boston Merchants' Association.

Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, national president of the United Irish League, arrived to-day at the Lenox, where he will have his official headquarters during the convention.

John O'Callaghan of Boston, national secretary of the U. I. L., called at the hotel and joined Mr. Ryan in greeting Mr. Redmond and his party. Soon after them came Michael P. Curran, secretary to the late Mayor Patrick A. Collins.

The celebration of the arrival of the envoys here really begins with the grand athletic tournament on the Huntington avenue ball grounds this afternoon, when old-time professionals play a base ball game. There are track events in which 150 of the crack athletes of New England compete.

Crack Athletes.

The list of entries for the games is one of the largesth ever known and includes W. W. Coe, shot-put; Ellery Clark, high jump, broad jump and shot-put; R. G. Harwood, high jump; B. L. Young, 100-yard dash; R. R. Wright, broad jump and hop, step and jump; Joseph Ellcock, 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash; Edward Ryder, three-mile run; D. Hagarty, shot-put; H. Barry, shot-put and hop, step and jump; "Ike" Sheehan, half mile; and many others. In all there are 183 handicap entries, and fifteen entries for the one-mile novice.

The baseball teams, under the captaincy of T. F. McCarthy, formerly of the Boston Nationals: Charlie Ganzel, Boston Nationals; Charlie Brown, Tom Smith of Louisville; Jerry McCarthy, Boston Unions; Jerry Hurley, George Wood of Philadelphia; Shaw of Washington; James A. Gallivan, Harvard; William T. A. Fitzgerald. Under the captaincy of "Buck" Donovan, formerly of Montreal; Ed Costello, formerly of the Whites; Mike Meagher, formerly of Bangor; Councilman J. L. Donovan, formerly of Haverhill; Philip Jason, formerly of Lovells; William Matthews, formerly of Worcester; Frank Costello, formerly of Boston College; Fritzie Gimber, formerly of Attleboro; Connie Murphy of the Roxbury A. A.; Willie Leonard of New York, son of the old time Boston favorite, Andy Leonard; Councilman James Hatton, Dan Hurley, formerly of Harvard; J. Crowley, formerly of Lowell; Andy O'Connor of Trenton, N. J. Tri-State League; Jack Sullivan, formerly of Providence, and R. F. Scannell, Jr., M. I. T.

TRAVERS LEADS IN FINALS FOR GOLF CHAMP

GARDEN CITY, Sept. 19.—A great crowd gathered to-day at the Garden City Golf Club links to see the final round in the national amateur golf championship tournament between Jerome D. Travers of the Montclair Golf Club, the present title holder and Max Behr of the Morris Country Golf Club, winners in the semi-finals. By defeating the veteran, Walter J. Travis, Travers was the favorite, and was picked by the wise ones to win. Behr had quite a following and expressed confidence in his ability to put up the game of his life.

On the first round of eighteen holes Travers led by 5 up. Going out the match was close enough to be thoroughly interesting. All the holes to the seventh were halved except the second, which Travers took in par 3 to 4 after Behr had overplayed the green, getting in the sand beyond. The match was squared on the seventh by Behr getting in par 5 to Travers 6, the latter starting with a slice from which he recovered well, but he needed two putts. The eighth was Travers in a fine par 4, Behr topping and then getting into the rough so he needed four to get the green, while his rival was on in two. Then Travers by getting the ninth in 3 to par 4 by being within seven feet of the cup on his second stood 2 up at the turn.

DRIVING ROD BREAKS.

Considerable damage was done to the roadbed of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad near the Savin Hill Station by the breaking of the driving rod on the Fall River express yesterday, and traffic was tied up for two hours. Broken portions of the rod dug into the roadbed at every rotation, pulling up the sleepers and sending clouds of dust flying about.

MAINE SUMMER HOMES IN PATHWAY OF FLAMES

DESPERATE FIGHT TO SAVE TOWN OF FALMOUTH; SPARKS DRIVEN BY HIGH WIND.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 19.—Forest fires to-day threaten the fine Summer residence section of the town of Falmouth with destruction The fine residence and farm buildings of Fred Young have been destroyed. The loss is $5,000.

Several fires are burning in the woods of Falmouth and the sparks are being carried in every direction by the strong wind.

In Portland to-day the air is choking with smoke from the burning forests and the sunlight can scarcely filter through the murky air. Without rain no man dare try to conjecture the future.

The battle with the flames continues in many places. The fire wardens are active everywhere, and they have organized the citizens in the threatened towns into fire-fighting organizations. Relays are used, so the battle continues night and day.

In Ellsworth and in Hancock County around Ellsworth there are about a half-dozen different forest fires. The villages of Surrey and Brookville were saved after long and desperate work.

At Lisbon the situation is worse to-day than it has been. The woodland fires are fanned by the rising wind and are being driven toward Bates's Corner, where a farming settlement of ten or fifteen houses is in danger. The wind shifted during the night and it was only due to this that the Proctor schoolhouse and the Miller place at Lisbon were saved.

SMOKE FROM FOREST FIRES OVERHANGS SEA

Captain A. W. MacKinnon of the Dominion Atlantic steamship Prince George, which arrived this morning from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, stated to a Boston American reporter that a dense cloud of smoke like a pall hung over the sea during the entire trip to Boston.

"The best observation I could make during the entire voyage was this morning, when, on nearing Boston, I could see only about a mile," said the captain. "At times the smoke hung over the ship so densely that I was compelled to keep the foghorn blowing practically all the time, and no observations could be made. I never saw anything like it in all my years of travelling from Yarmouth to Boston, and, though I have passed through many clouds of smoke from forest fires, none was so dense as the one that now hangs over the sea."

The Prince George brought in a large number of passengers, most of them being vacationists returning from the provinces.

REGISTRATION FRAUD CHARGES DISMISSED

The Board of Election Commissioners to-day dismissed the charges of illegal registration against the seven Ward 8 voters whose cases have been heard. The verdict is a victory for Martin M. Lomasney against whom the "colonization" charges preferred by Hyman Weinberg were directed.

Francis J. Horgan, attorney for Weinberg, has withdrawn the illegal registration charges against forty-two of the 122 men named in his complaint to the Election Commissioners. The board has taken under advisement the matter of granting hearings in the charges against the seventy-two others. The case of ex-Representative Michael F. Hart, charged with being illegally registered from No. 57 Hancock street, has been continued until next Monday at 10 a. m.

The men whose cases were to-day dismissed by the Election Board are Joseph H. Whalen, Patrick R. Whalen, Peter J. Cuddy, Francis E. Burke, Daniel Crowley, Jr., Edward F. Twigg and John J. Broe.

The commissioners also dismissed to-day a charge of illegal registration preferred against D. Bruce Meyers of No. 1854 Washington street, Ward 12. A. K. Robertson charged that Meyers's legal residence was in Ward 10.

Horgan this morning petitioned Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of the Municipal Criminal Court for a warrant for the arrest of Twigg, registered from No. 4 North Anderson street, on a charge of perjury. Horgan asserts that Twigg perjured himself when he accused him of receiving $200 from him to place him in the Boston fire department.

Chief Justice Bolster granted a hearing on Horgan's application for to-day. Horgan aksed that the Board of Election Commissioners, newspaper reporters and others present at the hearing be summoned as witnesses.

FATHER CALLS ON JORDAN AT COUNTY JAIL

Meet for First Time Since Imprisonment of Wife-Slayer.

COUNSEL PLAN DEFENCE

In response to a telegram believed to have been received late last night from Jesse Livermore, the millionaire brother-in-law of Chester S. Jordan, charged with wife murder, Lawyer William F. S. Hart of New York left the Hotel Touraine last night and took the midnight train for New York.

Attorney Hart and Jesse Livermore are to have an important conference to-day regarding the defence of Jordan.

For the first time since the arrest of Jordan, his father, Phineas J. Jordan, visited the son at the East Cambridge jail last night.

Mr. Jordan was accompanied by Attorney Jeremiah S. Sullivan of the firm of Sullivan & Teeling, who are acting for Jordan. The two called at the jail about 9:30 o'clock and were closeted with the prisoner until after 10 o'clock.

FOUR TRIPS A WEEK TO THE PROVINCES

Commencing to-morrow steamers of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Steamship Line will run a four-trip-a-week service, leaving Long wharf, Boston, Sundays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 1 p. m. The cheap fall excursion rates remain in effect until September 29.

KNOCKED DOWN AND HURT BY AUTO

Dodging out of the path of a team directly in front of a speeding auto, Frank Russell, fifty-one years old, was knocked down at the corner of Park and Beacon streets. The car was numbered 13,215, and was driven by William Kyriakon of No. 67 Dartmouth street. Russell was taken to the City Hospital badly injured internally and suffering with a dislocated hip. He gave his address as No. 81 Empire street, Lynn.

ARE YOU AFRAID OF SOCIALISM?

When EVERYBODY'S printed the big men's answers to Lincoln Steffens's question put to the Presidential candidates on both sides—"What the matter is in America, and what to do about it"—up jumped the Socialists. Said they, "We've got a candidate, too, and we can answer those questions. Would it not be fair to send Steffens to ask Eugene V. Debs 'What the matter is in America, and what to do about it'?"

It listened right to us, so we sent him to Debs.

Debs, the trouble-maker,—who figures in so many minds as the red-handed strike leader, the loud-mouthed agitator, the Debs that Eugene Field and Riley loved. What! James Whitcomb Riley? The same, no less.

We doubt if Steffens has ever done a better piece of work, and we think you'll feel the same about it.

Just because the October Everybody's is finer and fatter and friskier than ever, don't let any of the other good things lure you into missing this story of Debs.

"It may be deemed expedient to hang Debs some day," says Steffens, "but don't try to hurt him."

AMAZING REVELATION IN NEW OIL TRUST LETTERS TO FORAKER

W. R. HEARST STIRS ST. LOUIS AUDIENCE WITH ADDITIONAL EXPOSE.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18.—Following is the speech delivered by William Randolph Hearst here last night:

I hope you will pardon me for being very dry and technical to-night. I desire to be as nearly legal as a layman can be. Of course I do not want to be absolutely legal, because I want you to understand what I mean, and if a man is absolutely legal in his phraseology, nobody but a lawyer can understand what he is talking about.

I do desire, however, to avoid being oratorical, to avoid giving the impression of being partisan or prejudiced. I desire to avoid giving the impression of attacking any one or assailing any one.

When I arrived in St. Louis this afternoon I was interviewed by the press, a body of men to which I am very proud to belong, and they informed me that Mr. Haskell said so and so in regard to my "attack" upon him, and Mr. Foraker said such and such in regard to my "assault" upon him.

I have not attacked any one.

I have not assailed any one.

Proof Contained in Court Records.

I have read from court records and sworn affidavits in regard to Mr. Haskell's connection with the Standard Oil, and from signed letters in regard to Mr. Foraker's connection with the Standard Oil.

I do not make any statement on my own authority regarding Mr. Haskell. I simply read from bill of information, No. 2,204 in the Supreme Court of Ohio.

The document begins: "Now comes F. S. Monnett, the duly elected, qualified and acting Attorney-General of the State of Ohio, and gives the court to understand and be informed."

It is Mr. Monnett who made the accusation. It is Mr. Monnett who said that while he was prosecuting the Standard Oil Company an effort was made to bribe him on the part of the Standard Company with the enormous bribe of $400,000, and that (I quote from the complaint):

"The said party so calling him up by telephone from Cleveland, and the party making the proposition set forth in the complaint, was Charles B. Squires, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, now of New York city; and the stockholders and the officers representing the Standard Oil Company, that the said Charles B. Squires claimed were the parties through whom the proposition had come in some way to him, were Frank Rockefeller of Cleveland, Ohio, a stockholder of the Standard Oil Company; B. F. Squires, secretary of the Standard Oil Company, and Charles N. Haskell, late of New York city."

Mr. Haskell, in reply, says that Mr. Monnett mistook him for another Mr. Haskell, who had about the same name as he did, and looked about the same as he did, and lived in about the same place as he did; but had a different moral character.

Mr. Monnett does not corroborate Mr. Haskell's statement.

Mr. Monnett made an affidavit on the twelfth day of this month of September of this year, 1908, in which he waves aside the laughable claim of C. N. Haskell regarding his wicked double who had done the deed, and of the pitiful wail of Charles B. Squires regarding the effect of the exposure upon his business, and says:

"On returning to Columbus, Ohio, I prepared to take the depositions of all the parties concerned, including Charles N. Haskell, at which point of the procedure Hon. John A. Schauck, presiding justice of the Supreme Court, called me into the hall of the court room, and I found him in company with S. H. Tolles, of the firm of Kline, Carr, Tolles & Goff, the attorneys of the Standard Oil Company of record in this case, and Hon. Larry Neal, also one of the Standard Oil attorneys of record, sitting with said judge, and in their presence Judge Schauck gave them credit for informing him that I was about to take depositions upon the complaint in contempt which involved the Standard Oil officials, including numerous witnesses and Charles N. Haskell.

"I received a verbal peremptory order from Judge Schauck to cease taking the testimony, and he ordered me to dismiss the proceedings for taking depositions, with the drastic remark that the Court could take care of its own honor and preserve its own dignity, and could determine when any litigant was in contempt without the assistance of the Attorney-General in this matter."

Moreover, S. W. Bennett, the present assistant to the present Attorney-General of Ohio, does not seem to have any doubt about the gentleman connected in the bribery contempt case being Mr. Charles N. Haskell.

He does not credit this near-Haskell defence, the almost-Haskell invention, in which a wicked Mr. Hyde of a Haskell disgraces, without his knowledge, the glorious Dr. Jekyll Haskell, late of New York city.

What Squires Was Promised.

Mr. S. W. Bennett, on the twelfth day of September, 1908, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

"On the twenty-fifth day of January, 1899, I was special counsel in the office of Attorney-General Frank S. Monnett. At luncheon on that day Mr. Monnett told me the substance of a remarkable proposition which had been made to him that morning by Charles B. Squires, then of Cleveland, O. He said that Squires had promised to come back and repeat in my presence what he had told the Attorney-General.

"'What are you to get out of this?' was one of the questions which I remember was asked him.

"Squires said that the Manhattan Insurance Company was to be reorganized; that he was to be made its president and general manager, and that Frank Rockefeller was to be on the board of directors.

"'That will be enough for me,' was one of his exact remarks.

"After Mr. Squires had gone over the proposition in much the same language as is set down in the Attorney-General's bill of complaint in the bribery contempt case, Mr. Monnett asked Squires to tell me where the conversation with Haskell, Rockefeller and Squires on the Standard Oil reports had taken place. It is my recollection that Squires said he was ill at the time, and the parties had come to his house in Cleveland. He mentioned three names—Charles N. Haskell, Frank Rockefeller and F. B. Squires. He said they had all come to his house with the proposition he had already related to us and which is accurately related in the aforesaid bill of complaint.

Unfortunately, we are not told what Mr. Charles N. Haskell got out of it. But we know ourselves that at least he got out of it the chairmanship of the Platform Committee at the National Democratic Convention and the treasurership of the National Democratic campaign fund.

A man who was as intimate as he with the Standard Oil Company, and as liberal as he in the distribution of their tainted dollars, could be of practical value to the great moral organization known as the Democratic party.

Therefore, Mr. Haskell was put where he could do the most good, where he could first get from the Democracy a platform that would satisfy the Standard Oil, and then get from the Standard Oil a contribution that would satisfy the Democracy. There, in the front ranks to lead the Democratic hosts to victory, was placed C. N. Haskell along with those other self-sacrificing patriots, those other martyrs to principle—Roger Sullivan, Tom Taggart, Charles Murphy and Pat McCarren.

There C. N. Haskell, political paymaster of the Standard Oil in Ohio, could clasp hands with Pat McCarren, legislative handler of the Standard Oil suck in New York. There, like the Old Guard at Waterloo, they can draw their serried ranks about their noble leader, Mr. Bryan, that arch-apostle of reform, and lay down their lives for a cause and a percentage of the receipts.

Mr. Haskell's reply is characteristic of the fraud and false pretence that pervades the Democratic party. He ducks and dodges and disclaims. He claims to be a reformer and denies and falsifies the proof of his perfidy. He proceeds, as he did in regard to his Citizens' Alliance connection and in regard to the resolution introduced calling trades unionism "contemptible fanaticism," and spelling it wrong at that.

He proceeds as he did in regard to this clause offering a preference to all men who would not join the local union. He denies and falsifies, but here is a photographic fac-simile of his resolution with his autograph signature attached.

Foraker Tells Part, but Not All of Truth.

Mr. Foraker, on the other hand, replies in characteristic Republican manner. He practically admits he did serve the Standard Oil and that he is glad of it. He is different from Mr. Haskell. He tells part of the truth, but not all of it.

Mr. Haskell just naturally avoids the truth as a cat avoids the water. He almost acts like a cat with the hydrophobia and froths at the mouth every time he sees a fact. He has served the Standard Oil and he is secretly glad of it, but he will not publicly admit it.

Senator Foraker's statement is based on letters I read last night and if he had seen the letters I am going to read to-night he would not have made it. He would have done like Mr. Sibley and denied everything. He would have done like Mr. Archbold and denied everything. He would have done like Mr. Haskell and denied everything. He would have done like Mr. Bryan and denied everything. Mr. Foraker gave out the following signed statement:

"I do not know whether the letters given out by Mr. Hearst are true copies or not, but I assume they are, for I was then engaged in the practice of the law and was employed by the Standard Oil Company as one of its counsel in connection with its affairs in Ohio, where it was attacked in the courts and in the Legislature.

"While I do not now recall the details, I remember that I rendered the company such service as I could, charged for it and was paid. The employment had no reference whatever to anything pending in Congress or to anything in which the Federal government had the slightest interest. That I was so employed and presumably compensated for my services was common knowledge at the time; at least, I never made any effort to conceal the fact. On the contrary, I was pleased to have people know that I had such clients. It had not then become discreditable, but was considered just the reverse, to be employed by such corporations.

"That employment ended before my first term in the Senate expired. I have not represented the company in any way since. In other words, I have not represented the company in any way since long before it was attacked by the Federal government nor since before, with full general knowledge, I was re-elected to the Senate'."

Now, that is a good answer for those letters, but it isn't a good answer for these letters. We must give both Mr. Haskell and Mr. Foraker opportunities to try to think up some other answers.

"January 27, 1902.

"My Dear Senator—Responding to your favor of the 25th. It gives me pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit $50,000 in accordance with our understanding. Your letter states the conditions correctly, and I trust the transaction will be successfully consummated.

"Very truly yours,

"JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

"Hon. J. B. Foraker, Washington, D. C."

"26 Broadway, Feb. 25, 1902.

"My Dear Senator—I venture to write you a word regarding the bill introduced by Senator Jones of Ark., known as 'S 649,' intended to amend the act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, 'introduced by him Dec. 4.' It really seems as though this bill was very unnecessarily severe and even vicious.

"Is it not much better to test the application of the Sherman act before resorting to a measure of this kind? I hope you will feel so about it and I will be greatly pleased to have a word from you on the subject.

"The bill, I believe, is still in committee.

"With kind regards, I am.

"Very truly yours,

"JOHN D. ARCHBOLD."

"HON. J. B. FORAKER,

Washington, D. C."

Now, my friends, I have been accused by Democrats of directing my attacks mainly against the Democratic party. I imagine I am also accused by Republicans of directing attacks chiefly against the Republican party.

Mighty Power of Money for Evil.

I ask you if I have not dealt moderately and temperately with both parties? I assure you that if I spoke fully the righteous indignation that is in my heart over this outrage against the sanctity of our citizenship, against the integrity of our government, I would denounce both of the old parties for treason to the tSate.

There is no greater danger to our Republic than this mighty power of money exercised for evil. There are no greater traitors to the public than these unscrupulous trusts who corrupt the government in order to secure illegal and unjust advantages.

I believe the Republican party has long been maintained by these criminal corporations. I believe the Democratic party has long waited an opportunity to be tampered by these criminal corporations, and when first tempted, fell. I believe that when both old parties prove false, a new party should be founded.

And this is the reason for the formation of the Independence party.

WRIGHT WILL BUILD ANOTHER AEROPLANE

BRUISED AND BATTERED AVIATOR WILL RESUME FLIGHTS AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Hovering between life and death in the Post Hospital, with his broken bones bound in splints and with the fever of his wounds sapping his strength, Orville Wright, the injured aviator, announces that he will only await recovery to build another aeroplane that will eclipse even the record of the one that dashed to earth at Fort Myer.

It was said to-day by hospital surgeons that Mr. Wright will recover.

Wright saw his chief mechanic, Charles E. Taylor, this morning and learned that the flier that has amazed and delighted thousands by its performance at Fort Myer was a total wreck. Its motor alone of all its machinery remains intact.

"Mr. Wright was despondent, but he is not beaten," said Taylor after his interview. "He will try again just as soon as he is able."

The War Department feels that it owes much to Orville Wright. While no official action has been taken looking to a continuance of the aerial tests of airships built by the Wright brothers such continuance and for practically an indefinite period may be had by Orville Wright upon request.

This assurance will be given Wright as soon as the matter can be broached to him.

PHILIPPINES WANT FREEDOM, SAYS BRYAN

Special to the Boston American.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 19.—William J. Bryan arrived here at 10 o'clock a. m. to-day. He was met at the depot by Mayor James B. Martin and Alexander Troup, son of the former national committeeman, who dropped dead in New York city two weeks ago.

Mr. Bryan's purpose in stopping here was to express his sorrow at the death of Mr. Troup, his intimate friend, to Mrs. Troup. Mr. Bryan was visibly affected at meeting young Mr. Troup at the railroad station. He was taken in an automobile to the Troup homestead on St. Ronan street and later visited the cemetery in which Mr. Troup's body is interred.

About 1,500 people crowded about the Union Station to greet him. He left at noon for Providence.

Mr. Bryan discussed the Philippine independence question.

Replying to Mr. Taft's statement that the independent residents of the Philippines prefer a Republican victory to his promises, Mr. Bryan said that when this appeared Fiske Warren of Boston had cabled to Alberto Barreto of Manila as follows: "Taft declares independistas prefer Republican victory. Is this true? I desire immediate authoritative opinion of Centro and of yourself as president." Mr. Bryan explained that the Centro is the governing body of the Nationalist party, composed of representatives from each of the thirty-nine provinces.

Mr. Warren received the following reply: Nationalist party, with the independent creed, prefers triumph for the Democrats. General convention of July 12 agreed unanimously upon Bryan's platform."

"The Nationalist party," continued Mr. Bryan, "is the largest group in the Philippine Assembly, and according to Mr. Barreto is unanimously opposed to Mr. Taft's election.

"On June 18, the Philippine Assembly by a vote of 54 to 18 declared that the people desire immediate independence. Mr. Taft cannot bring to his support any authoritative declaration by any considerable portion of the Filippinos."

ST. PETERSBURG NOW IN PANIC OVER CHOLERA

Special Cable to Boston American.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 19.—The cholera epidemic, as deadly as warfare, is raging in the capital of Russia, and conditions reached their climax to-day with crowded hospitals, an additional number of new cases and threatened panic. The populace is on the verge of rioting, and with numbers of the streets congested with conveyances of the dead, the scene presented to-day was appalling in its aspect.

The cases developed in the past twenty-four hours were as many as the whole previous total. At midnight there were more than 480 cases in the hospitals and it was feared that this number would go beyond 500 by noon to-day. Since the outbreak of the epidemic there have been 484 deaths and a total of 1,677 cases.

The military hospital is being utilized for the care of the patients, but all available room was occupied to-day, and the military authorities gave out the information that other arrangements would have to be made. St. Petersburg was wholly unprepared for the scourge which surged over the city, leaving death and gloom and despair in its wake. The sanitary conditions were utterly unfit, making it impossible for the authorities to cope with the situation. Already the government has taken official cognizance of conditions, and has co-operated with the surrounding countries to prevent an exodus from the nation, thus carrying the dread disease all over Europe.

MARTIN CURLEY FOR THE STATE SENATE

Martin P. F. Curley has announced his candidacy for the Senate in the Eighth District. He has been connected with Ferdinand's Blue Store, at the corner of Warren and Washington streets, Roxbury, for thirty-two years, and has lived in the district all his life. At recent meetings of the Democratic organizations in Wards 20 and 21, the candidacy of Mr. Curley was unanimously indorsed.

Comment of the Press Upon Mr. Hearst's Expose of Foraker

FROM TO-DAY'S BOSTON JOURNAL.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 18.—A brilliant lawyer, a magnificent organizer of men and one of the ablest platform orators in his party, Joseph B. Foraker sits to-night in his home on the hill and faces the spectre of political annihilation. The candidate of the Republicans has shrunk from him, and his strength in the State is gone. However it may go with him in the country at large, he is a political Ishmaelite in Ohio to-night. Foraker and the remnants of the old Foraker following are doomed. Senator Foraker admitted in a signed statement to-day that while a Senator he had received large sums of money from the Standard Oil Company and, because of that confession, he has been cast out of the Taft camp.

FROM THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT.

But one comment is possible upon such admissions (Foraker's) as these. The receipt of compensation for representing a great corporation, whose relations to legislation are widely ramified and very pervasive, while at the same time attempting to serve the people of Ohio in the Senate of the United States, was decidedly questionable. The inquiry should be carried further, and Mr. Foraker's relation to other great corporations, if possible, ascertained.

FROM TO-DAY'S NEW YORK WORLD.

Mr. Archbold's admission that the letters made public by Mr. Hearst are not forgeries seems practically certain to end Senator Foraker's political career. * * * Mr. Hearst's further charge that Governor Haskell of Oklahoma, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, was a paid agent of the Standard Oil Company, * * * is a matter which the Democratic National Committee is bound to investigate for itself. It could not afford to have a treasurer against whom rested even the shadow of a suspicion of secret relations with the Standard Oil Company.

FROM TO-DAY'S NEW YORK PRESS.

These documents show that when the oil monopoly wanted certain legislation defeated, Senator Foraker received instructions from No. 26 Broadway as to the Standard's wishes. They demonstrate that Mr. Foraker did what he was asked to do, and when it was done he received certificates of deposit, one for $15,000, another for $14,500 from Mr. Archbold, "in accordance with our understanding."

OVER MILLION IS MISSING

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The Mercantile Securities Company, a concern which has had twenty months of life, and which has sold $1,500,000 worth of stock to people all over the country, is in a receiver's hands.

When the receiver called on the officers to turn over the assets, he got engraved certificates of stock in "allied and subsidiary companies" and $319.92 in cash. The receiver will try to find out where the other $1,499,680 has gone, for he does not attach value to the certificates.

The concern is the second in the chain of the Rhodus brothers' high finance corporations.

KICKED MAN MUST WALK BACKWARDS

RICHMOND, Ind., Sept. 19.—L. M. Shroyer, a Blackford County farmer, who was kicked by a colt last month, can only walk backwards now. Since discovering his affliction he is learning to do everything else backward. He is having his clothes made with all the buttons on the back, and generally sits at the table looking up the chimney.

GIRL'S BODY IN RESERVOIR

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—With bruises on the face and the marks of fingers about the neck, showing where she had been choked, the body of Nellie Green, seventeen years old, of Highland Park, was found in the fortified reservoir near Yonkers. There is every indication that the girl, who was last seen alive on Sunday about midnight, was murdered and her body thrown into the water within 200 yards of her home.

The case in many respects resembles the Hazel Drew mystery. It will take an autopsy to determine whether the girl was dead or only stunned when she was thrown into the reservoir.

CHILD FATALLY BURNED BY LIME

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 19.—Albert Brown, four years old, son of George Brown of Meeting street, was fatally burned this afternoon by falling into a bed of lime. The boy was watching the process of slacking the lime when he stumbled and fell face foremost into the mixing trough. When he was lifted out it was found that he had been terribly burned about the hands, legs and body. He died at the Rhode Island Hospital.

SAYS DAUGHTER SLAIN, BUT SHIELDS SUSPECT

FATHER OF ESTHER HILBERT DECLARES BODY OF GIRL IS HIDDEN IN BUSHES.

CHESTERFIELD, Sept. 19.—The finding of a small flask containing a portion of what is believed to be chloroform, near the spot where pretty Esther Hilbert was accustomed to spend the most of her spare time, has added a new element of mystery to the already strange disappearance of the beautiful college girl nearly a week ago.

John P. Hilbert of Philadelphia, the father of the young woman, refuses to accept the police theory that his daughter is still alive and probably in some western State, the secret bride of a former sweetheart, and declares that the girl is the victim of a foul murder.

He further states that his opinion is borne out in the finding of the poison vial and also says that he believes Esther was drugged and her body hidden in the bushes near here.

Hounds to Take Up Trail.

In speaking of the case to-day he said he would have the entire country thoroughly searched and would, in all probability, employ the services of bloodhounds to help him.

Mr. Hilbert even went so far as to declare that he had suspicions as to who was responsible for the death of his daughter, but he declined to tell upon whom his suspicions rested.

Asked if anybody in the neighborhood had disappeared since the girl went on Sunday Mr. Hilbert replied "Nobody but Mark Clothier, a farm hand, who had been working for me for the past week. He left Tuesday night, but I understand he has been located at his home in Goshen."

Scout Murder Theory.

The report that Miss Hilbert had been seen in the railroad depot at Springfield in company with an unknown man was received here to-day, but little importance is attached to it by the authorities. They do not doubt the word of the party who reported it, but believe it to be a case of mistaken identity.

The officers generally do not entirely adopt the theory of the father that the girl is dead, and still hold to the suggestion that she has gone away, either to Washington State or elsewhere, and State Officer James McKay said that he would not be convinced that Esther was dead until her body was found or some equally definite proof.

2 NEAR DEATH IN AUTO WRECK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The famous "Hairpin curve" on the old Vanderbilt cup course on Long Island was the scene of another auto wreck to-day, in which two persons narrowly escaped death. F. A. Thompson and his machinist, L. E. Vincent, were trying out Thompson's new sixty-horsepower Flat racer, preparing for the cup races on October 10. They were running around the curve at something like fifty miles an hour when the front axle of the car broke. As the wheels buckled under the car Thompson held on to the steering wheel and shut off the power. Vincent was hurled out, landing in a ditch. He received only a few scratches. Thompson managed to cling to the steering wheel and remained in the car, which did not overturn.

COLLAPSES IN CAR; MAN OF 85 EXPIRES

Suddenly collapsing on a Mt. Auburn car shortly before it reached Harvard square, Cambridge, at 11 o'clock to-day, Dennis Maher, eighty-five years old, living at No. 52 Holworthy street, Cambridge, died in the Harvard square waiting room of the Elevated railway.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—The Lincoln Park Zoo has been increased by the birth of two leopards to Kittie, the queen of the leopards. Keeper Devery is highly pleased.

STEAMER AEON A TOTAL WRECK

Special Cable to Boston American.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 19.—Five of the crew of the British steamship Aeon, which sailed from San Francisco for Sydney on July 6 and has been overdue, have arrived at Fanning Island.

They report that the Aeon went ashore on Christmas Island on July 18 and was a total wreck.

All the crew and passengers among whom were the wives of several American naval officers are safe and well. They are camped on Christmas Island and have ample food and water. A house has been built for the women.

PRAIRIE HERE FOR NEW FLEET MEMBERS

En route for Panama with a number of men to fill vacancies in the Pacific fleet, the auxiliary cruiser Prairie dropped anchor in Boston harbor to-day shortly before 11 o'clock. It is expected that the Prairie will take about fifty men from the ships in the Charlestown Navy Yard, and will leave here either to-morrow or Monday.

SIXTY CUBAN PUPILS LAND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Sixty Cuban boys who are to attend school in the United States arrived to-day on the steamer Mexico from Havana. The boys will be scattered through various schools in order that the boys, being so separated, may acquire the American language and customs more readily.

'MAD VENUS," GRACE DARBY, IN WORKHOUSE

Girl Who Escaped From Taunton Insane Asylum Located in R. I. Institution.

Grace Darby, the so-called "Mad Venus," whose escape from Taunton Insane Asylum in 1905 created a tremendous sensation, has just begun a six-months' sentence at the Rhode Island State workhouse. She was arrested in Woonsocket on a charge of larceny of $20 from a traveling salesman. This charge was dropped but she was sent to the workhouse on another complaint. She is there under the name of Phoebe Phillips, but is identified as Grace Darby through a statement just issued by Chairman James F. McCusker of the Rhode Island State Board of Charities and Corrections. The Taunton Insane Asylum authorities have been notified.

Grace Darby is twenty-four years old. She was born in the western part of this State. When she came to girlhood she began to show signs of an incorrigible temperament. When she was eighteen she was committed to Taunton. She escaped in 1905. It was said she had aid from the outside. She was smuggled out of the State and, after a sensational chase, was located in a small town in Maine. The Massachusetts authorities had no right to take her out of that State and the matter was dropped.

She appeared in Woonsocket a month ago with an Armenian she said was her husband. She had been in Boston, she said, for two years.

HATTIE FORSYTHE'S MOTHER TO WED

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 19.—A marriage certificate has been issued here to Fred G. Chadbourne, a real estate dealer of Providence, and Mrs. Jennie Myra Forsythe. Both have been married before, Mrs. Forsythe having been twice divorced. She is the mother of Hattie Forsythe, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's associate in her Weber-Field days. Her birthplace is given as Dana, Mass. Mr. Chadbourne obtained his divorce in June, 1901. He is forty-five years of age and was born in Brighton, Mass.

SOME "DON'TS" FOR THE DEBUTANTE — By Dorothy Dix

THE DEBUTANTE SHOULD CONJURE UP, IN IMAGINATION, PICTURES OF THE THINGS SHE SHOULD NOT DO, AND SHE WILL NOT STUMBLE INTO THE PITFALLS THAT AWAIT HER.

DON'T pose. Even a goose would look sillier than it does if it tried to act like a nightingale.

Don't assume a romantic role. Romance has ruined as many girls as drink has boys.

Don't pretend to be what you are not. It is such a relief to meet a plain Mary Ann after all the Marie Antoinettes.

Don't affect to be literary or musical when you are not. We all adore the girl who hasn't read the "six best sellers" and hates Wagner.

Don't affect to be blase or to have seen and heard everything. You have no greater charm than being a dear little girl, to whom everything is fresh and new and lovely. It pleases men to feel that they are like showmen, exhibiting to you for the first time the interesting features of this great vaudeville we call life.

Beware Confidences

Don't tell all you know because you feel confidential and it is twilight. You will spend bitter hours regretting indiscreet confidences. When you are as old as I am, you will know that all the world ever finds out about us we tell ourselves.

If you make mistakes, don't call attention to them and other people will probably not observe them.

If you fall in love, keep it to yourself, so you shall avoid the comments of your friends.

If you think you are slighted, don't let wild horses drag it out of you. Be impervious, oblivious to it; so shall you defeat your enemies, and rout them with scorn.

Don't brag of your conquests. It is vulgar. If a man really loves you, it is unprincipled to parade his affection before another. If he is merely flirting, the conquest is no more to be valued than certain poor game a sportsman may knock over, but would never boast of or count.

Silence Is Still Golden

As for conversation, remember that it is not so much what you say as how you say it that tells, and none is so eloquent as those who indulge in bursts of intelligent silence while the other person talks.

Don't fall into the error of trying to be profound. A debutante discusses Plato with her ball partners during her first season, and jabbers pingpong to them the next, and by the difference in conversational topics you may gauge how much she has learned.

Be not a flatterer, yet bear in mind that all of us like the individual who knows how to say pleasant things to us. This is not because we are vain, but because it is enjoyable to have bouquets shied at us. Besides, we have Scriptural authority for the soft answer that turneth away wrath.

Dangerous Pitfalls

Don't flirt with married men or listen to the man whose wife doesn't understand him, and who laments, "if he'd only met you in time." Dear little sister, you are playing with a firebrand. Don't. He has told that same story to the debutantes of the last ten years. Try to remember that you don't hold the office of public comforter. The divorce courts were specially instituted to hear the tales of woe of the unhappily married. They are paid for it.

Don't hint. Kindly recall that the men who constitute the dancing and party-going set in society are men, as a general thing, who work for salaries. If there are any millionaires among them, your prudent mother will be sure to point them out, so you will have no difficulty in knowing which from t'other. The average salary is certainly not over $150 a month. The chances are that it is less. Figure out how, on that amount, a man can pay his board, and his washlady, and his tailor, and then send violets and bonbons and theatre tickets.

What Hints May Lead to

Be blind to the signs of the seductive oyster, cultivate a preference for electric cars instead of cabs, refuse candy and buy your own flowers. I'd like to be a clergyman long enough to preach a sermon to girls on the sin of hinting, and tell them that every one who influences a young fellow to spend more than he can afford is particeps criminis on the dreadful day when that man blows out his brains rather than face his defrauded creditors, or when he stands before the bar and pleads guilty to embezzlement.

Don't chew gum or much candy in public. A cow is the only interesting ruminating animal, and you don't desire to look like anything less poetical than a gazelle or a deer.

Don't be affected. Don't use the broad "a" you acquired with so much trouble and at such expense unless you are perfectly certain it won't fail you in time of need.

Don't snub other girls. Many of them have eligible brothers.

Don't be greedy and monopolize the only eligible man and the best corner for "spooning." The least admirable creature on earth is a pink-and-white pig.

Don't drink cocktails with the men who ask you. Nine times out of ten they are only trying you to see if you are the kind of girl they don't want to marry.

Don't aspire to be a man's woman. It damns a girl with faint praise to say men like her, but her own sex do not.

Don't be idiot enough to despise conventions. They are women's salvation.

Don't think you are the whole show, even if you are a debutante. There are others.

Finally, beloved, don't snub your parents. They mean well, and there are people foolish enough to respect them.

When Lovers Disagree

The Spinster Lady Solves an Engaged Pair's Dilemma

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE Spinster Lady sat on the veranda and gazed thoughtfully at the two young people pacing the garden walk.

"I don't quite understand those two," she murmured. "They have been at just this stage of their friendship for over two years. Jack should either propose to Marian or leave her alone, and if Marian is causing the delay she should take Jack or leave him. I don't like these long-drawn-out courtships."

The man and girl in question came slowly toward her and seated themselves on the steps. The man looked determined, the girl troubled.

"We have come to you to help us settle a very vexed question, dear Spinster Lady," said the man.

"Yes?" was the reply. "I hope I can be of some help. What is the trouble?"

"For three years I have loved Marian and for two years I have been proposing to her at least once in two weeks."

"And she won't listen?"

What the Trouble Was

"Oh, yes, she listens, but she won't say the one word that would end the discussion."

"I could say 'no,'" laughed the girl.

"Ah, but that isn't the word, and you know it isn't."

The Spinster Lady turned to Marian.

"What's the reason, dear? Don't you feel that you love Jack well enough?"

The girl flushed rosy red. "Yes," she said, softly, "I love him."

"That's the worst of it," groaned Jack. "She says she loves me, but she won't marry me. Was ever anything more tantalizing?"

"But you must have some reason, child."

"Yes, I have a reason. Jack wants his mother and sister to live with us."

"You see," broke in Jack, apologetically, "I can afford to marry if we all live together, but I can't afford to keep two households going. Marian says that she will not marry me until we can have a home all to ourselves."

"I don't believe that the plan of wife and mother-in-law living together ever works," said Marian. "There is sure to be friction."

"But mother loves you, Marian, and she quite understands that you would be head of the house."

The Spinster's Advice

"What do you think?" said Marian, turning to the Spinster Lady. "You see, I don't mind economizing, but I do not believe any of us would be happy."

"If I loved a man," said the Spinster Lady, "I think I would be willing to marry him, no matter how many 'in-laws' had to live with us. You would have each other, you know, and that ought to compensate for everything else."

"Then your advice is to marry?"

"Yes, to marry and to enter upon your married life with the determination to get on well with your husband's people and to make a happy home."

"Oh, Marian, dear, do try it," said Jack, coaxingly. "It will be so easy to work and to make a success of things with you to help me. Don't you think we could be happy just in being together?"

The girl looked first at Jack, then at the Spinster Lady.

"You are two very special pleaders," she said softly, "and I——"

"Yes?" eagerly.

"Well, I think love wins the day."

HIS MASCULINE MISTAKE

THE young man with the lavender tie broke the five-minute silence.

"I wish you'd tell me what is the trouble," he said. "I don't see why you got mad all of a sudden and went and sat over there. What have I done?"

"Done!" echoed the girl in the pink frock from beneath the shadow of a big lamp shade. Her voice was pathetic. "Why, you—you said I was homely!"

"I never did!" almost shouted the young man. "Why, Kitty——"

"Yes, you did!" persisted the young woman. "That is, it was the same as saying I was homely. You said I wasn't pretty. I don't see, in that case, why you pretend to be in love with me. I should think you would pick out a girl who was attractive and——"

"You are attractive enough, goodness knows!" broke in the young man. "I don't see what you mean by talking this way! I——"

The Solemn Truth

"Didn't I ask you to tell me the honest, solemn truth?" demanded the girl in the pink frock. "Didn't I make you solemnly promise you'd answer my question truly? Didn't you say you would? Then, when I asked you if you thought any one was better looking than I you said you did."

"You said you wanted the solemn truth," persisted the young man. "After I promised I had to stick to my promise. I don't see why you should take it this way."

"I'm not vain," said the girl in the pink frock. "Goodness knows I am conscious of my shortcomings! Still, I thought if you really loved me you'd think I was the most beautiful——"

"So you are," said the young man, stoutly. "That is——"

"Oh, you can't get out of it," broke in the young woman. "You don't think I'm a bit good-looking. You think Grace is, though, don't you?"

"She's pretty," admitted the young man. "Not as pretty as you, though. Be honest now—do you expect me to say you are handsomer really than Helen of Troy or Lillian Russell or those people? I mean to others. Of course, I think you're the best ever!"

Hurt, That's All

"You are just saying so!" cried the young woman, rebelliously. "You know you think I have a pug nose and that my complexion is poor and my eyes are smaller than they should be. I'm just hurt, that's all. It shows that you don't really care for me!"

"Don't you understand?" persisted the young man. "To me you are the loveliest girl on earth. And you are pretty. But that's not saying there are not raving beauties who would hold the spotlight away from you.

"I don't see what difference that makes. It would be just as foolish for me to get mad because I make $3,000 a year and you should remark that you knew a man who made $4,000. Three thousand is pretty good and I'm satisfied with it. I'm not going to take my hat and walk out of the front door because you remark that there are men who make more money. I shouldn't think you loved me any less!"

"That's different," said the girl under the lamp shade. "Entirely different. You think I'm ugly and then expect me to smile sweetly and take it!"

"I never said you were ugly," said the harassed young man. "You know I think you're the prettiest girl in town! I'd love you if you weren't pretty!"

"I don't believe it!" said the young woman.

"It's so," said the young man. "Looks haven't anything to do with it. You'd be just as nice if you really did have a pug nose and all those other defects. But you haven't."

"You just the same as said so!" insisted the young woman. "No, I won't come back over there. I don't see why if you thought I was ugly you had to tell me!"

"You made me promise to tell the truth before I knew what you were going to ask," defended the young man.

"I suppose, then, if you hadn't promised you'd have deceived me!" cried the young woman. "You'd have told me an untruth!"

"I would if I had good sense!" said the young man, desperately. "I don't see——"

"Don't you think it's late and that you'd better go home?" broke in the young woman.

"So Nice of You!"

The young man with the lavender tie arose and started for the portieres. She let him get as far as to turn the knob of the outer door before she sprang up.

"Harry!" she called, faintly. "I—I really didn't mean you to go. And I know I'm the crossest, ugliest——"

"You're all right," said the young man as he came back and took possession of her hands. "And I don't give a bang for Helen of Troy. I wouldn't go across the street to look at her!"

"Wouldn't you?" asked the girl in the pink frock. "Then it doesn't matter whether I'm pretty or not!"

"But you are!" said the young man, stoutly.

"It's so nice of you to say so," declared the young woman in pink with a satisfied sigh.

That Pie's Real Victim

The Wife Suffers for Hubby's Ill-Treated Stomach

"I WISH you wouldn't hum that confounded tune," said the married man.

"I didn't know you objected to it, my dear," said his wife. "I heard you humming it yourself only yesterday morning."

"I beg your pardon," said the man.

"Well, perhaps, I was mistaken," said his wife, cheerfully. "It may have been something else."

"It's a wonder you wouldn't stick to it," growled the man. "As a general thing you'd offer to get witnesses to swear it was the same tune. What are you smiling at?"

"I didn't know I was smiling."

"Yes, you were. If you've got anything to say I'll thank you to say it. If you want to tell me I don't know what I am talking about, why don't you?"

"I never thought of such a thing, dear."

"I guess I know what I hum and what I don't hum and my memory isn't so poor that it won't take me back a few days. I say I didn't hum it."

The Pestiferous One

"All right, then. You didn't. I won't dispute you."

"You'd like to mighty well if you thought you could," said the married man.

He scowled at his paper for a few minutes and then laid it down to ask his wife what she was looking so glum about.

"Why!" she exclaimed in surprise, "I'm not looking glum, am I? I don't feel the least big glum. Why should I?"

"That's what I'd like to know," said her husband. "I don't know any reason why you should, but that wouldn't cut any figure with you. If you felt like pulling a long face you'd do it whether there was any reason or not."

"I never felt happier in my life."

"Of course not, when you are exasperating me."

"Why, what makes you so cross?"

"That's right," said the man, bitterly. "Lay it on me. I'm an ugly, ill-tempered brute, because I ask you not to hum something I object to and take the liberty of denying doing something I never did. Say it right out, why don't you? I wonder if ever you will let me say something without trying to make an argument and a debate of it. Where are you going?"

As to the Dinner Hour

"I thought I'd just go downstairs a moment and——"

"I'm not fit society for you; is that it?"

"You were reading your paper and——"

"That's another crime in your eyes. I haven't any business reading the paper, I suppose. It's a reflection on you, isn't it? Perfectly outrageous! I don't wonder you resent it. No woman of proper spirit would put up with it for a moment.

"Annabel, if you laugh again I'll—I'll leave the house and get my dinner at a restaurant. If you had told me you didn't intend to have dinner until 9 o'clock I'd have stayed down town to dine anyway."

"Now, my dear, it's only twenty minutes to seven."

"Only! Is twenty minutes to seven our dinner hour, may I ask? If it is I think I might have been consulted before the change was made. Of course, I'm not a person of much importance in my own home—only the man who pays the bills; but I think even that function ought to bring me one or two small privileges. I think if I were running the house I'd contrive to have the meals on time now and then."

The Reason for It

"We'll try to do better in the future," said his wife. "I expect it's because the meat came a little late. It can't be much longer now."

"Why don't you go and see about it?" demanded the man.

"I was going to when you stopped me. James, what did you have for lunch to-day?"

"I didn't have any lunch. I just had time to swallow a piece of apple pie and——"

"Well, no wonder, you poor man," said his wife. "I couldn't think what it was. Why didn't you say so at first?"

How to Ice Pears

WHEN there are over-ripe pears on hand, which are too soft for the table, but not absolutely decayed, peel and core them, put them into an ice cream freezer with an equal measure of cold water, the juice of one lemon or an even teaspoonful of powdered citric acid to a quart of pears, and oversweeten the combination; freeze it like ice cream and serve it for dessert.

Any which remains unused can be thickened with a little gelatine dissolved in warm water and cooled before being added to the fruit ice; measure the melted fruit ice and allow the proportions of gelatine indicated for making wine jelly in the recipes which are inclosed in each package of gelatine. After adding the gelatine put the fruit ice into a jelly mold and let it grow firm. In a cool place it will keep for two or three days. Turn it from the mold before sending it to the table. Use it for luncheon or at a family dinner for dessert, taking care that it is very cold.

The Man of 100 Masks

A Story of Love, Intrigue and Mystery

CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued

"MY name is Magruder. I am a private detective."

Margaret shivered. "Detective" was a word that in her ears could not at the moment sound pleasantly.

"I wish to have a few moments' confidential conversation with you. It is most important."

"To me?"

"To both of us, if I may make so bold."

"I will give you four minutes."

She entered the little anteroom.

"Is the Guv'nor in his room?" she asked.

"No, Miss Armour. He ain't come yet."

"I can use it then. I want to talk to this gentleman."

Big John could deny her nothing. In a couple of minutes she was alone with Magruder.

"Please be quick," she said. "I have barely time to dress."

Fact and Fiction

"I am a man of few words," boasted Magruder. "Three or four days ago I received a visit from a gentleman who had just arrived from South America. He commissioned me to hunt out for him Miss Margaret Armour, daughter of the late—in a word, your father's daughter. As a matter of fact"—Magruder's matters of fact were invariably fiction—"I could have told him there and then where to find you; but something about my man told me to go slow. His face seemed familiar to me, and as most of the faces familiar to me are those of confirmed criminals, I wished to spare you any annoyance, if my surmises were right. I promised to find you for him, and I set my wits to work. I tried to remember who my man was. Only this evening have I succeeded in recalling him, and I hasten to warn you that he has discovered you himself, and that very likely you will hear from him, perhaps this evening. He calls himself Lancelot Armour, and says he is your uncle."

"I have already seen him," murmured Margaret, wondering painfully what was to come next.

"You have seen him! Ah! he's a sharp one. He doesn't let the grass grow under his feet. And he calls himself your uncle?"

"Yes."

"Ah! He is sharp. He's better furnished than I expected. Well, miss, if I were to tell you that your Mr. Lancelot Armour is a notorious criminal who has been wanted by the police for the last fifteen years, what would you say?"

Margaret could say nothing, for her head was whirling. The electric candelabra depending from the ceiling seemed to take on the proportions of an August noonday sun, and to be burning into her head. She heard the roar of waters in her ears and her heart leaped wildly in her breast and then stood still. She fainted.

To do Magruder justice he was no sluggard. Half the theatre was in the room in a minute. The great Hawkman arrived at the moment and the incoming audience was searched for a doctor. One was found, and he gave instructions that Miss Armour should at once be taken to her home. She was lifted unconscious into a cab and whirled away to her apartments. We may leave her there for a little, tended by the faithful Brinch, while we return to the Spa Theatre to take note of what was passing there.

Miss Van Alster was busy dressing when a tap sounded on her door, and her attendant, answering, carried in a note brought by a special messenger boy.

"The affair is arranged. George." That was all.

"The Affair Is Arranged"

It was enough, however, to cause Miss Van Alster's pulses to beat madly and to make her jump up from the mirror before which she was seated "making up," and execute a fantastic fandango.

"Hooray! Hooray!" she cried in her shrill eaglet voice.

Toddy burst into the room breathless.

"Armour's ill!" he cried. "Change for the 'Dear Girl!'"

Mimi caught her breath. George was keeping his promise with a vengeance. "The affair is arranged," she muttered to herself, "and p. d. q., too."

After a copious piqure of morphine, she went on as the "Dear Girl," after Mr. Hawkman had apologized for the absence, through indisposition, of Miss Armour.

"Miss Armour's place will be taken by Miss Mimi van Alster, for whom I crave your indulgence."

"Van Alster"—that name sank like a pellet of hot lead into the brain of one man in the audience—a man sitting at the back of the dress circle, a man who had, with but rare exceptions, seen every performance of the "Dear Girl" since the first night, now historical. One night he would be in the parquet, another in the gallery. It was John Joseph Armour.

Van Alster! He remembered that name. Zucchi had spoken it. John Joseph Armour sat out the performance until half an hour from the end. Then he got up, and leaving the theatre went to a nearby hotel and there he wrote a carefully considered letter.

Miss Mimi van Alster was receiving more or less genuine compliments when the letter was handed to her.

It was headed, "Private and Confidential."

Dear Madam: (it ran) a well-known New York manager who has witnessed your performance to-night wishes to open negotiations with you with a view to your appearance at his theatre as leading lady. As he wishes to remain unknown, should the offer he is prepared to make rest unaccepted, he has empowered me to treat with you. I regret having to ask you to call on me, but I am unaware of your private address. Will you, therefore, make it convenient to be at my office, No. ——, Columbus Avenue, to-morrow at noon? I may say that the offer to be made you is in every way worthy of so brilliant an actress.

Madam, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JACOB CAMPBELL.

P. S.—Above all, not a word of this to anybody. My client is a rival of Mr. Oscar Hawkman. J. C.

The cup of Mimi van Alster's happiness was overflowing.

Would she go? Would she not!

CHAPTER XXVII.

LUCIAN FALCONER left the office of the agent-general of the Ceballos line fully persuaded that his companion was Lancelot Armour, brother of John Joseph and uncle of Margaret. The man who had said he was the agent-general declared that Lancelot Armour was surely Lancelot Armour; that he had known him for more than twelve years, and that he was a man of consideration in Buenos Ayres. Certainly this was convincing.

"My boy," said Armour, expansively, "I like you. You're an honest young chap. I can see that much with one eye shut. There's nothing I like like honesty. I will say no more, even after so short an acquaintance as ours has been—there's no man I would more willingly see my niece's husband. I size up character quickly, and I am hardly ever mistaken. I liked you the first time I ever saw you."

Lucian bowed and expressed his thanks for being so well considered.

"Now," Lancelot Armour continued, "the next thing to consider is what is to be done about my unfortunate brother. According to my idea he's mad—mad as a March hare. He should be shut up. If we say anything to the police they will be all for arresting him. That would be very repugnant to me—to Margaret as well. Indeed, it must be she who is thought of first."

At the Stage Door

"Now, my idea is that I ought to get into communication with him, satisfy myself that he is really mad, and then have him shut up in a private lunatic asylum where he would be well taken care of. I should also inquire into his affairs. If he still retains any of the ill-gotten gains—and I have no doubt that he does—I should see—indeed, it would be my principal business to see—that it was handed over, integrally, to the men he has despoiled. I am not a fabulously rich man, but if I look into the odd corners of my bank-book I may find one or two thousands that I could add to the general fund for paying my brother's victims. That would be only fair, I think."

"More than fair," agreed Lucian; "it would be an act of generosity. After all, there is no claim on you."

"I am glad you agree with me," said Armour. "We must get Margaret to coincide with us. But still, she'll follow your lead, you lucky young dog."

"I'm not so sure about that," said Lucian. "She has a mind of her own, and she is accustomed to think for herself."

"Well, well, if you're ready—more coffee? no?—we'll go and wait for her at the stage door."

So said, so done.

Big John knew Lucian well. He came out from his box and called him aside.

"No need to wait to-night, Mr. Falconer."

"No? Why not?"

"Because Miss Armour's gone home."

"Gone home! But the show's not over!"

"No, sir. She took ill before the show started, and the doctor sent her home in a hansom. Nothing serious, he said, only she wasn't to be disturbed by anybody."

Lucian felt at a loose end. Ordinarily he would have gone straight to Margaret, but in the face of Mr. Armour's express injunction he did not care to do so; he was Bohemian by nature, but he had been brought up in the conventions, and there is nothing so difficult in life to get free from. He sauntered aimlessly round into Broadway.

At the door of the Cafe de l'Europe he stumbled into an old gentleman who was coming out. He muttered an apology, and was passing on when he was surprised to hear his name pronounced.

"It's Mr. Falconer, is it not?"

He stopped and turned.

"Yes, that's my name," he said, looking at the old man.

"You don't remember me?"

"I'm afraid I don't."

"Carpmael—Jacob Carpmael. We were neighbors at the first night of the 'Dear Girl.'"

"Ah! yes, so we were," said Lucian. "I remember now."

"You were walking?" ventured Carpmael.

"Yes."

"If report says truly you are going to marry Miss Margaret Armour?"

"What do you mean?" Then Falconer laughed. "Report says truly. But how can that affect you?"

"Will you come with me and hear?"

"Upon my word, you are a most mysterious old gentleman. Can't you tell me here? No? Very well, then."

Winnowing Out Victoria's Wooers

IT was quite in accordance with their idea of the fitness of things that the new occupant of the great house next door should be beautiful Miss Victoria Dare. Ever since the kindergarten days the small neighbors on either side had made it the dwelling place of countless princes and princesses of their fancy, and there was no denying that a real one was ever so much more satisfactory.

When Miss Dare first dawned on the view of Margery and Peggy she was immediately acclaimed an angel. The idea was not a new one, however, for it had been voiced of her generally ever since—well, ever since she had come into the world to be the object of loving dispute among countless aunts and uncles, not to mention grandparents and neighbors and friends and—but that is what the story is about.

From this time on Miss Dare was the recipient of the ardent devotion of two little girls. It was expressed in the most unexpected ways, from the bestowal of a rescued and bedraggled puppy to sticky and decidedly doubtful looking samples of their united efforts at fudge-making.

All went with comparative smoothness until "they" came—"they" being an assortment of young men who were prone to dance attendance upon Victoria. They were all duly inspected by Margery and Peggy, and privately approved of or disapproved of, as the case might be. Safety lay in numbers, however, and nothing serious was apprehended until the matter was sifted down to two, the others having been promptly relegated to the none too exclusive station of "brother."

With the usual keen [illegible] tender years, the small neighbors were quick to discover that on [illegible] ing there was wont to be seen with disturbing regularity a quantity of American Beauty roses at Miss Dare's home.

With unusual penetration they discovered that these invariably followed the Tuesday evening calls of one Arthur Lee. With equal persistency and in equal profusion appeared on Friday morning the pink roses following the Thursday evening calls of one Joseph Jeffreys.

At first both were regarded with undisguised hostility by two pairs of childish eyes, but gradually, by their clever management of bribes in the way of candy, this sentiment was reduced to a sort of tolerant friendship.

Things were progressing favorably, when one day Margery was heard to say with considerable heat: "Anyhow, if some one is bound to marry Miss Dare, I do hope it will be Mr. Lee. I always have liked 'em best with light hair in fairy tales."

As it happened, Peggy had always been keenly partial to dark-haired heroes, and Mr. Jeffreys's choice of candy being much to her taste, she loyally waged a wordy war in his defence.

After that there was no longer true unity in their friendship. Margery was addicted to noting the superiority of American Beauties over pink roses, while Peggy upheld the other side of the argument.

Much to the amusement of Victoria they would, with an elaborate show of innocence, try to discover which of the two was the favored one. Miss Dare showed a surprising willingness to discuss each in turn with studied impartiality.

There came a morning—a Thursday morning—when, contrary to her usual custom, Miss Dare received Margery and Peggy in her own rooms upstairs. Soon she was conscious of two pairs of eager eyes regarding a profusion of violets about the room. The discovery was rapidly followed by the question:

"Oh, who sent the lovely violets, Miss Dare?"

Victoria hesitated a moment, then laughingly answered:

"Why, dear, the Wednesday night man."

* * *

For a time the enmity of Margery and Peggy was at rest, and they again had a common interest—the mysterious Wednesday night man. Miss Dare, however, evinced a supreme indifference to such an interesting subject.

At last they came to the conclusion that she didn't care a bit for him. "Because," said the knowing Margery, "she never talks about him as she does about Mr. Lee."

"Because," declared Peggy, "she doesn't keep his flowers in the front windows as she does the pink roses."

So they were convinced of the hopelessness of the case of the Wednesday night man.

But there came a time when both agreed that grown-up people really did the most unexpected things, for both the red and the pink roses ceased to come and the florist seemed to grow nothing but violets.

Again Margery and Peggy took up a common cause, and this time it was that of the Wednesday night man.

OYSTER BISQUE

WASH and chop one quart of oysters and heat the liquor. Strain this over the oysters and add a cup each of stock (chicken or veal) and water. Season with a slice of onion, bay leaf, mace, a sprig of parsley and a few stalks of celery, and cook all slowly for half an hour. Soften one cup of bread crumbs in one cup of hot milk, add to oyster mixture and rub all through puree sieve. Thicken a pint of cream with two tablespoons each of butter and flour. Blend the two mixtures, season well with salt and white pepper and serve.

MISS IOLA M. SMITH.
No. 17 Hoyle street, Providence, R. I.

SOUR PICKLES

ONE-HALF bushel green tomatoes, one-peck onions, four or five pounds cabbage, one large cauliflower. Slice tomatoes about half-inch in thickness and onions likewise. Slice cabbage not too fine nor too long in length. Clean cauliflower and cut in small pieces. Salt in alternate rows with common salt. Next morning drain and put in granite preserving kettle and cover with vinegar. Put in some mixed pickling spices to taste. Heat slowly and let simmer, stirring often with wooden spoon to prevent breaking. Do not boil. When all vegetables are transparent, let cool and put in crock, covering well, and put in a cool place. Be sure not to salt vegetables in tin. Only half of this amount may be used for small family.

MRS. AURORA BARRY.
Care C. Ballard, Wheelwright.

ELDERBERRY JELLY

PICK elderberries from stems and set on the stove in a kettle with about one cup of water. When heated through strain through jelly bag, add one cup sugar to one cup of juice. Boil together about twenty minutes, until jellied. This is very nice.

MISS JANET SANDS.
No. 168 Allen Street, East Braintree.

SPONGE CAKE

FOUR eggs; beat yolks and whites separately; add to whites one cup sugar and to yolks three tablespoons of cold water with one-half teaspoon of soda. Add one cup of flour sifted with one teaspoon of cream of tartar. Flavor to taste. Bake three-quarters of an hour. This is delicious, like angel cake.

MRS. GEORGE WESTON.
Box 78, Lisbon, N. H.

DOUGHNUTS

BEAT to a cream one cup of sugar and a piece of butter the size of a large walnut. Add next two well beaten eggs and one cup of sweet milk, one-quarter teaspoon each of mace and ground nutmeg, one-quarter teaspoon salt. Add flour enough so that the dough will not stick to the hands when rolled on the board. Put two teaspoons of baking powder in the flour. Fry in smoking hot lard and dust with powdered sugar when cold.

ALLAN FORBES, BEFORE COURT, DENIES CRUELTY

Pony "Barlow," Used in Polo Contest, Is Closely Inspected by Judge.

SOCIETY AT THE HEARING

With earnest indignation Allan Forbes, millionaire clubman and expert polo player, denied in Salem District Court to-day the charges made by agents of the Massachusetts Society for Protection of Cruelty to Animals that he had been cruel to his polo pony "Barlow" by spurring him so hard in a recent polo match that the pony's sides bled freely from the spur cuts.

The hearing, held before Judge Sears at Salem, was continued to next Tuesday for arguments of counsel. A number of fashionable women and clubmen were present to listen to Mr. Forbes's defence.

Two interesting exhibits at the hearing were the spurs Mr. Forbes said he used at the game in question and the pony himself, a wiry Texas steed named "Barlow," who was brought out in front of the courthouse by Forbes's counsel for Judge Sears to inspect. The Court left the bench, walked out into the street, followed by the principals in the case, and made close inspection of the pony's sides and flanks.

Charles M. Clark of Saugus, Essex County agent of the S. P. C. A., testified that at the polo match between the Dedham Polo Club and the Myopia Hunt Club teams at the Myopia grounds in Hamilton on September 9 he saw Forbes ride from the playgrounds to his stable at the end of one of the playing periods on a pony branded "L. O.," and named "Barlow," as Clark subsequently learned.

Clark swore that the pony was suffering from cuts on the nigh flank and near the saddle strap.

Frank V. Phillips of Nahant, another S. P. C. A. agent, corroborated Clark's story.

Dr. Harrison A. Sullivan, veterinary surgeon and time-keeper at this game, said he noticed all the ponies at the game and did not see any unusual spurring or roughness.

Trainer Frank Small of Hamilton, who was at the game, had seen no indication of severe spurring.

Mr. Forbes was on the stand an hour in his own defence.

BURGLARS CRACK SAFE FLEE WITH RICH LOOT

FOR SECOND TIME IN YEAR YEGGS ROB B. & W. OFFICE AT WELLESLEY.

Burglars broke into the office of the Boston & Worcester Street Railway Company at Wellesley Hills early to-day, cut through the top of the safe and secured several hundred dollars.

As all the reports turned in by the conductors from their day's runs were taken, as well as the cash, the company is unable yet to tell just how much money is missing.

It was first reported that nearly $3,000 was missing, but this has been scaled down considerably in a later statement from the company's office, and the actual loss may be under $500.

This same office was entered last April, and $800 was taken. Yesterday was a light traffic day along this division, however, and the receipts were correspondingly less.

Stole All the Accounts.

A vast deal of inconvenience is caused, in addition to the monetary loss, as the burglars took all the conductors' report forms, books and other papers. It will take the office force quite a while to get duplicate reports from the conductors and get an exact idea of the amount missing.

The break occurred between 3 and 3:30 a. m. Watchman John Buckley says:

"I started from the office in front of the car barn at 3 o'clock, as usual. The office lights were burning. In the barn the foreman and half a dozen men were getting cars ready for the early morning runs.

"At 3:30 I was back at the office again in my rounds. The lights were out, and the office door was ajar. When I entered and turned on the lights I found the place had been broken into.

Cut Through the Safe.

"The burglars had cut out a pane of glass in the side window, pushed back the bolt and raised the window. They started, evidently, to cut away the lower hinge on the safe door, but gave it up. Then they cut through the metal cap under the wooden hood on the top of the safe and got at the interior of the safe that way."

Buckley recalls that two men were loafing about the premises near midnight. One was tall and wore a black derby hat. The other was of medium height and wore a mixed suit and soft hat.

Examination of the grounds outside the barn revealed carriage tracks leading toward Boston. It is thought the burglars came in a carriage and drove away after making the break. The Wellesley, Brighton and Boston police were notified, but no trace of the burglars had been secured.

GETS ALLEGED HOLD-UP MAN

Early to-day Patrolman McDonald of the West End had an exciting chase after an alleged holdup man and finally landed him in a cell in the police station. The man arrested is Pasquale Chimpa, twenty-seven years old, claiming to live at No. 114 Merrimac street.

The victim of the alleged holdup is Dennis Hurley of No. 108 Harbor street, Salem, who says that while he was passing down Sudbury street Chimpa leaped out from a doorway and snatched his watch, after striking him several blows in the face.

Hurley's cries attracted the policeman's attention.

MAURETANIA'S PROPELLER BROKE AT SEA

Big Liner Arrives at New York After Battle With Tremendous Sea.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The big Cunard liner Mauretania reached port to-day, twenty-four hours late, after a thrilling chapter of accidents, in one of which twelve firemen and stokers were badly hurt. Several of the men had broken arms and cut heads and the big list of cabin passengers suffered from panic, seasickness and discomfort, so that they greeted the quarantine boat with cheers.

On Thursday, at noon, the starboard propeller, run by the low pressure engine, broke. There was a tremendous sea at the time and the liner suddenly heaved upward amidships and then began to vibrate so that passengers were shaken from their chairs.

The accident caused a shifting of coal in one of the big bunkers and several men were buried under the tons of fuel. Captain Pritchard, standing on the bridge, was besieged by a flock of terrified women, who ran shrieking from their cabins and implored him to let them know if the ship was sinking.

The engines were stopped so that the extent of the damage could be ascertained and the Mauretania slewed around into the trough of the sea where she rolled uncomfortably. It was found that the after-starboard plates near the propeller had been stove in, and there was a leak in that compartment of the steamship's hull. The pumps were started working and kept going throughout the rest of the trip.

MANIAC HOLDS TOWN AT BAY

WAUKESHA, Wis., Sept. 19.—After an all-night battle and a siege in which hundreds of shots were fired, John Smith, crazed by love and liquor, was captured in a farm house at Calhoun, several miles from here to-day. He had shot and wounded Olga Grabow, a girl of fourteen, whom he loved, shot three times and fatally wounded her mother and shot Sheriff J. C. Dwimmel, who attempted to arrest him. Then, barricading himself in the Grabow farm house, armed with two rifles, he fought a posse and 200 citizens all night long before he was captured.

FIND WOMAN DEAD IN ROOM

Mrs. Fannie A. Bruce, a widow, sixty-two years old, living with her son, Harry A. Bruce, at No. 17 Allston street, West End, was found dead in her room shortly before 9 o'clock to-day.

Mrs. Bruce had recently suffered two paralytic shocks, and it is believed by the police that these or another caused death. The body was removed to the North Grove street morgue and the medical examiner notified.

PRESS AGENT GETS ATHLETE'S GOAT

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—A second breezy press agent story involving the name of "Chuck" Ide, the Yale athlete, was exploded to-day. Three weeks ago the press agent gave Ide the role of "Best Man" in the apparently imaginary wedding of an actress then appearing at a local theatre. Thursday the press agent again startled Ide, this time as a bridegroom with an actress as bride. Young Ide said the stories are false.

MRS. VANDERBILT DENIES TROTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt and her sister, Mrs. Samuel Wagstaff, formerly Pauline French, arrived to-day on the Mauretania. Told that she had been reported engaged to marry Spencer Willing, Mrs. Vanderbilt said:

"Oh, that is simply ridiculous. There is no truth in it whatever."

LUMBER CRUSHES PLAYING CHILDREN

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 19—Crushed to death by an avalanche of lumber and lying one at each end of a plank on which they played see-saw, two New Kensington children were found by frantic parents after an hour's search in Kennedy's lumber yards. They were Edna Johnson, five years old and Albert Johnson, six. Another child had a remarkable escape.

'THE DEVIL' IN EVERYONE, SAYS DOROTHY DIX

"The Evil Thought We Dally With May Become the Demon That Possesses Us."

By DOROTHY DIX.

The story of "The Devil" centres around a man and woman, who mean to do what is good and true and honorable, but who fall through the weakness that is within them.

An artist named Karl Mahler has engaged to paint the portrait of the wife of a rich banker. Her name is Olga Hofman. Years before when Karl was a struggling young drawing master and Olga a poor young girl, the two have met and learned to love each other, but with their first kiss still burning on their lips, they part. Olga has been asked in marriage by the wealthy banker, Herman Hofman, and prudence counsels her to accept him.

Time goes by and Olga and Karl meet and he taps his forehead and says: "I come from there." Then this demon in human shape begins his subtle work of temptation. First he laughs at the scruples that keep them apart. Then he conjures up for them the picture of the joys of love, the thrill of clinging arms and kissing lips until they tremble under his words like a wind-swept harp, and then when this fails he maddens them with jealousy.

At last the woman goes away. Her husband comes for her and she goes, clinging to him as if for protection against herself. That night the Hofmans are to give a ball. It is to promote the engagement of the artist and a rich young girl that Olga has picked out for Karl for a wife, for she feels that she will be safer if he is married. The devil, in the guise of Dr. Miller, goes to the ball, and so works upon both Olga and Karl that they are beside themselves. At last he induces Olga to write Karl a note in which she tells him she can struggle no more and that she will go with him anywhere.

Sweeps Away Last Barrier.

It is the sweeping away of the last barrier, for although she repents for a moment of her folly and her weakness, the devil has done his work too well. She has surrendered to her passion, and in the very act of taking back the unread letter from her lover she throws herself in his arms, gloats with him over its burning words, and is lost while the mocking demon smiles.

Never was there a more vivid piece of symbolism than this play, for Dr. Miller typifies, of course, the devil of temptation that lies in illicit love. He was the secret thought, unseen, unacknowledged, that lay always in the back of the minds of Olga and Karl, but that never leaped into visible form until they permitted their clinging hands and eyes to tell in the studio the things they still forbade their lips to utter.

Men and Women Should Read Story.

Every one who can should see this wonderful play, but those who cannot, should read the vivid story that has been made out of it for the Sunday American and that begins in to-morrow's Sunday American.

Men should read it because it teaches how the evil thought that we daily with may become a demon that possesses us and drives us into doing a wrong that we really abhor.

Maybe it's an appetite for drink that a man feels that he is going to curb some day; maybe it's his avarice that makes him take queer paths to making money; maybe it's a mania for gambling that leads him to "pinch" a little off of his employers profits for himself. Whatever it is, it is the personal devil that will arise some day and claim a man for his own, even as Dr. Miller claimed Karl.

Women should read this story, especially those women who believe that they are safe in cherishing a guilty love, so long as they call it Platonic and do nothing criminal. "The Devil" will show them as nothing else can on what broken reed they lean, and how a gust of passion, the dying embers of a fire, or the perfume drifting back from a bygone day may sweep away their poor defence, even as it did Olga's.

"The Devil" teaches such a moral lesson as we all need in these days of mighty temptations, and its lessons are for each and every one of us. As a novel, it begins in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

HUB PRINTERS' BALL TEAM IS HOT GUY LEVI

Champions of Typographical League Bring Home Pennant, Trophy and Glory.

The Boston championship baseball team arrived home to-day with pennant, trophy, glory galore and all the rest of the triumph that belongs to a pennant bunch.

"What?" yells the baseball fan, "Boston champs? How long since? When did this happen? Champs of what? You must be dreaming? Do you mean the Boston American team or the Boston Nationals?

Oh, no, no, no. Nationals? We should say not. American League champs, hardly.

The champs in this case are the real champs, the one and only Boston championship team in the Printers' League.

"Oh, Printers' League is it?" says the fan.

You bet it is. Didn't the Boston Printers' team go over to New York and win three straight and wallop everything in sight and get the championship of the Printers' League, the pennant, the trophy and everything else that wasn't nailed down? Well, rather!

Look 'Em Over.

Well, who is this Boston team? Here they are:

'Gene McCarthy is captain and centre field. And his team mates are: H. Whitcomb, catcher; C. Ebert, pitcher; P. A. Barry, first base; George McDonnell, second base; "Jim" Donovan, third base; Carl Lonergan, shortstop; J. E. Farrell, right field, and "Doc" Rooney, left field.

There are eight teams in the league, Boston, Pittsburg, New York, Chicago, Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Philadelphia. The team from each city is composed of the crackerjack players among the printers of that city. The Bostonians represent Boston Local No. 13, International Typographical Union. They went into the 1908 league with 1,000 per cent. and came out with 1,000 per cent., winning every game they played.

Going some, eh?

After the final game Thursday, when the Bostonians clinched the championship by defeating Pittsburg 5 to 1, they stayed in New York over night, then started home on the Metropolitan line steamer Harvard, arriving here at 8 o'clock to-day.

Printers One Best Bet.

They were met at the wharf by 300 enthusiastic rooters, headed by Stone's Military Band. With the championship banner and trophy borne triumphantly in front the happy players and rooters paraded up High street, up Summer street and down into Newspaper Row, the line of march taking in the newspaper offices. The team was given hearty applause along the line of march. The general sentiment was summed up in the pertinent expression of one fan, who said:

"Boston would better back the printers' team after this and forget the big leaguers."

The members of the team give praise to Captain McCarthy for his generalship in the field and particularly for his stick work at critical points. But the modest captain says all the credit is due the team for the general good work and for the fine support given Pitcher Ebert. And there you are.

GETS 'SENDOFF' BY THE 'HOOK'

With his voice hid somewhere in his boots, but his nerve conspicuously displayed, a chesty individual who hailed from Revere thought he would surprise last evening's audience at the Columbia, but the chesty one didn't know where he was at until the hook workers got him in their meshes. His friends were on hand to see that he got a rousing send-off, but the send-off was on the end of an instrument known to the "profession" as the hook. A tenor from "Sunny It" blew forth a few notes in his native tongue, but he too, was relegated to the rear. Ethel Drew was the big favorite in a song; Master Blackmer was next; and the Rogers followed in the list of prize winners.

SYRIAN PASTOR SHOT ON TRAIN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—The Rev. B. Bellamor, said to be pastor of a Syrian church in Scranton, is in the Hahnemann Hospital with a bullet wound in his right arm. He was shot while asleep in a chair car of a Pennsylvania train from Washington to this city last night. He had visited the Turkish embassy at Washington.

Mr. Bellamor told those who assisted him that he knew of no enemies who would seek to do him harm.

EXPRESS KILLS TWO BOYS.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 19.—Blinded by the headlight of the Uniontown express and heedless of the approach of a westbound wreck train, two boys were killed and a number had narrow escapes at Lambert street crossing of Pennsylvania.

FIRED TWICE AT CONSTABLE

When Benjamin J. Baker, a constable, went to the home of Walter Stearns, No. 23 Union avenue, Jamaica Plain, and attempted to enter his house on a civil process, he was, according to the police, attacked by Stearns, who fired two shots from a revolver through the door at Baker. Stearns then barricaded his home so that no one could enter.

Officers from the Jamaica Plain police station, however, who had a warrant sworn out by Baker for his arrest on the charge of assault on a constable, induced Stearns to leave his fortress and come to the police station.

Stearns was fined $10 last October for assault on his brother-in-law with a club.

TO GIVE RACE MEET.

Joseph A. Murphy and Barney Schreiber are two St. Louis, Mo., horsemen that are contemplating organizing a racing association and expect to give a Fall meeting at the St. Louis Fair Grounds.

Anty Drudge Gives Advice to the Salesman.

Salesman—"I have a patent washboiler which burns denatured alcohol at much less cost than coal or wood—"

Anty Drudge—"You'd better go into some other business, young man, if you want to make a living. Since I've been telling the women how to wash clothes with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, without boiling, all kinds of washboilers have gone out of style. Good day."

Fels-Naptha will take grease out of clothes in cool or lukewarm water.

It loosens all kinds of grease quick as a wink, and takes out every trace of the spot.

That's why butchers', and painters', and machinists' clothing can be washed better with Fels-Naptha than any other way.

It's easier, too; in summer or winter, requires no boiling, hot water nor hard rubbing, and makes a better job of it.

Because Fels-Naptha dissolves grease almost instantly, women who have tried it prefer Fels-Naptha to any other soap for washing dishes.

There is no necessity for putting the hands in hot water.

Puts a fine polish on glass and china.

It is likewise superior in cleaning coats, or rugs, or curtains, or anything else that has become spotted or soiled.

In fact, you will find that anything cleanable can be cleaned quicker and better and easier with Fels-Naptha.

And for laundry purposes, Fels-Naptha is a revelation to women who have always washed in the old-fashioned, washboiler-and-hard-rubbing way.

Directions for all purposes are printed on the back of the red and green wrapper.

"THE DEVIL"

as a play, is the sensation of the American and European stage. As a novel it is the most wonderful literary triumphs of the Twentieth Century.

Here are some "Devilgrams" from Franz Molnar's great play:

Feminine presentiment always feels the approach of the husband ten minutes ahead of his arrival.

A wife is like a monocle—it looks well, but one is better off without it.

Life has no object but to be thrown away.

Going short of the market is digging a pit for another and falling into it yourself.

Be a pleasant rascal and the world is yours.

Whatever the price, happiness is cheaply bought.

Love yourself; only yourself. Wear the softest garments, sip the sweetest wines, kiss the prettiest lips.

The wonderful play of Molnar has been novelized by Joseph O'Brien and

Will Appear Exclusively IN THE Sunday American

TIGERS DEPEND UPON FOUR PITCHERS TO WIN

DETROIT, Sept. 19.—Jennings has decided to cut down his pitching staff for the last three weeks of the chase for the league honors. From now on he will depend upon Donovan, Mullin, Summers and Winter.

Killian, whose arm shows but little improvement, will not work unless it is to finish a game that is clinched or lost, while Eddie Willett will be handled in the same manner. Willett has been knocked out of the box the last four times he has worked and Jennings is afraid to risk him. If it so happens that he goes in to finish a game and shows his old-time form, he may be added to the regulars again, but not until then, unless one of the four men picked go badly.

Donovan is at his best condition now and Hughie will most likely slip Bill in more often than he did in the early part of the fight. The Wild one can stand it. Mullin is pitching to-day the best ball of his career, regardless of pitching averages. He is getting the ball away faster and keeping his infield on its toes by so doing. He and Donovan are expected to bear the brunt of the fight, although Summers again showed yesterday that he can stand up against the stiffest kind of a struggle baseball can produce. This colt twirler has had to go into overtime the last four games he has worked and not once has he ever wavered. Winter, picked up as a chance after Boston was through with him, has developed into one of the stars of the staff.

Twenty-one games remain for the Tigers. These four men will be expected to divide them up.

And a decision was reached last night in regard to the catchers. Charley Schmidt will catch all of the remaining games on the schedule unless further in need of a rest.

The sturdy German likes the work and will be able to stand it unless injured.

Perry at third has shown that there is good stuff in him, but it looks like too great a task rushing him into such a fight at this stage. Bill Coughlin is suffering from a bruised finger, but could play in a pinch. He will be given a rest for a little while and then sent back into the fray. If the rest does him good it will improve the infield 30 per cent. There is nothing like a fresh man at work to keep the jaded ones hustling. For example, remember Schaefer's work on that Eastern trip last year when they won the flag.

KID M'COY SAYS THEY'LL HEAR FROM HIM SOON

BY TAD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—That "old fox" of the canvas battlefield, Kid McCoy, is going to climb through the ropes again and hustle a few of them.

The Kid, after his go with Peter Maher a few months ago, got the bug that he was still there and ever since has been longing to get back into his running tights and dance the fandango before the hungry fight fans. When he dropped Maher with that hook it looked stronger than ever, and three weeks ago the Kid started to do work. He is up at Cooper's gymnasium every afternoon these days working out with some local boys, and within the next two weeks will be seen before one of the local clubs signed up with one of our blossoming middleweights.

"If I can get away with three or four of the best in town," said the Kid yesterday, "why I'll go right after O'Brien and Papke or this Langford fellow and hustle them around a bit. I think Jim Stewart, Fred Bradley or Sailor Burke would do to try my slap on, and, of course, if you fellows think that I'm there, why I'll go right along until I get my bumps.

"Maher? Say, on the level, do you think I could get him some place for a go? Oh, I just love to mix with Peter. He's so obliging. Sharkey? Oh, he couldn't get into a circus tent, let alone a pair of tights. Well, you'll hear from me in a week or so."

* * *

Frisco sports are still loyal to Stanley Ketchel, although he was hopelessly beaten by Billy Papke in Los Angeles last week. Now that the pair are signed again, the Western sports are tickled to death, and one writer claims that even money will prevail in the betting at the ringside. Ketchel's manager says that his boy was extremely weak going into the ring five pounds lighter than Papke and very flabby in the muscles. After the bell rang Papke closed Ketchel's left eye completely with a wallop, and before the second was over had the other eye puffed so that Ketchel could only see through a little slit. He fought nine rounds almost blind and took his licking like a soldier.

T. E. Jones, who manages Papke, is getting "in bad" out West already. First, when he drew the color line they made him look like a quitter, and later, when he threw Baron Long down on the Kelly fight, he turned the Los Angeles sports against him. It is said that he agreed to fight Kelly against Papke, win or lose with Ketchel, and then changed his mind and signed with Ketchel before a Frisco club.

It's a hard life, isn't it, T. E.?

* * *

Abe Attell is letting out another squeak about Battling Nelson. He says that he can lick the Dane just as sure as Jones has pink whiskers. He admits that Gans has the big sign on him, but as for Nelson, Abe thinks him a pipe.

In excusing himself for the poor go with Moran, Attell says that he broke a bone in his right hand while training and that Dr. Apple put a shot of hop in the hook to relieve the pain. During the fight Abe says that the hop affected his stomach and made him sick. Oi, yoi!

* * *

But back to that Gans thing. Funny that they can all lick Nelson—that is, they think they can, but still they admit that Gans can beat them. And, once again, Nelson can always beat Gans. The "old master" might be all in, but it's a 100 to 1 that he can give the balance of the lightweights a few pointers in the art of slam.

A New York sport offered Joe $4,000 to box three different goes here in New York. Gans hasn't answered as yet, but it's a cinch that he will box again.

We need some fighters with class.

GANZEL TO BE MANAGER.

When the Cincinnati Nationals pile into Atlanta next Spring for the early training they will still have at their head John Ganzel, the present manager.

Ganzel was an experiment this Spring. He was selected because nobody more desirable could be secured for the job. Ganzel was given the place only after deals for Bresnahan, Leach and other players had fallen through.

Ganzel has made good as manager of the Reds, and it is a settled fact that he will be retained in charge of the team for next season. He has done fully as well as was to be expected with the material at hand, and even better than many thought he would do when he took hold. Mainly as the result of his advice and example, the Reds have played a faster, cleaner, snappier game of ball this season than at any time in recent years.

MOODY THE AGGRESSOR.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19. — Willie Moody of Port Richmond easily defeated Tommy Lowe of Washington in a tame six-round bout at the Ontario A. C. Moody was the aggressor, and he had Lowe breaking ground at all times.

CARLISLE INDIAN KICKERS WILL OPEN COLLEGE GRIDIRON SEASON TO-DAY

Football will have its official opening to-day. The Carlisle Indians, as in former years, will be the first of the important elevens to enter the lists when they meet Conway Hall, a minor team of little note. Penn State, which has caused some trouble for the big colleges, will also get under way against Bellefonte.

Cornell will be the last of the big elevens to get into harness. The Ithacans will not begin their practice until September 21, and the coaching staff will have to rush things to have the men in any kind of shape for their first game on October 3.

No member of the "Big Four" will be seen in action until September 26. University of Pennsylvania will be the one to take the initial plunge in what should prove merely a warming-up gallop against West Virginia. On the following Wednesday Harvard and Yale will enter the lists, and three days later Princeton and Army and Navy will put the season into full swing.

Thanksgiving Day, which used to mark the climax of football, will have only one game of much importance, when Cornell and Pensylvania have their annual battle on Franklin Field. The season will be brought to a close with the game between the Army and the Navy at Philadelphia on Saturday, November 28.

Following is a schedule of the most important contests to be held in Eastern circles the coming season:

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19.

Carlisle vs. Conway Hall, Pennsylvania State vs. Bellefonte, at Easton, Pa.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23.

STAR TALENT TO APPEAR IN THE PRELIM BOUTS

The directors of the Armory Athletic Association have succeeded in arranging two excellent bouts to precede the main bout next Tuesday evening, when Kid Goodman meets the California whirlwind, Fighting Dick Hyland.

In the opening bout of eight rounds those classy featherweights, Tommy Rawson of East Boston and Eddie Carr of South Boston will face one another.

The other bout will go ten rounds, and will be between those old rivals, Kid Manning of Pawtucket and Willie Reilly of South Boston. The club has also made arrangements to give details of the voting in the primaries in the political contests that have been creating so much excitement recently.

The real big noise of the evening will be, however, the twelve-round bout between Fighting Dick Hyland of California and Kid Goodman, the local boxer.

Hyland came East with a great reputation, and this he has upheld since. It takes a good boy to beat Young Loughrey, Bert Keyes and Rudolph Unholz, yet Hyland has done that recently in six-round bouts in New York City.

$2,000,000 WON ON THE TURF BY KEENE

Two million dollars! Only one man in the world has ever won it by the fleetness of foot of horses—James R. Keene. He has accomplished this not by the aid of the betting ring, not by manipulation, but by the legitimate winnings of his horses. He began at the root of the business by studying the blood lines of the old English thoroughbreds that were successful; their potency to transmit speed in their progeny, and the family trees of the most noted brood mares, the dams of winners. When his theory regarding breeding was firmly established he began by selecting high-class stallions—a few of which raced in his colors—and paid large sums for English and French mares. This transfusion of the best American, English and French thoroughbred blood brought about happy results.

Spendthrift and Miser.

Spendthrift and Miser were the two first race horses Mr. Keene owned. He purchased them from Dan Swigert of Kentucky for $15,000 in the Fall of 1878. The following Spring he won his first stake in the East with Dan Sparling, a three-year-old. This was the Withers Stakes. It was run at old Jerome Park. Mr. Keene had bought Dan Sparling during the Winter for a large sum. Spendthrift was the Winter favorite for the Withers.

In those days the prominent events, such as the Withers and Belmont, received heavy support in books operated by men during the Winter. Spendthrift was a better horse than Dan Sparling, and later in the season he won the Belmont, Lorillard and Champion Stakes. But subsequently the great horse met his Waterloo in the Travers and Kenner Stakes, when he met Falsetto. Mr. Keene shipped Spendthrift to England during the Winter of 1880, but the horse went amiss and never raced on the other side. On his return to America Spendthrift became famous as the sire of Lamplighter, Kingston and other good horses.

He Races in Europe.

It was during this period, when Mr. Keene confined his racing ventures to Europe, that he achieved his early success. Foxhall, named after his son, carried his colors to victory in the Grand Prix de Paris in France and the Cesarewitch Handicap in England. That was the year (1881) Iroquois won the English Derby. Many horsemen considered Foxhall a better horse than Iroquois.

Shortly after this English invasion a twist in Mr. Keene's fortunes caused him to retire temporarily from the turf. In the middle eighties he sold Spendthrift and many of the brood mares he had gathered together, and for a year or two he was out of the racing and breeding business. But a turn in the tide of his finances in the nineties caused him to renew his chase for turf honors, and shortly after Domino brought him glory.

Domino Wins $175,000.

Domino will live long in his memory. Success came just at a most opportune time. The year 1893 was one of financial depression, and money was very tight. Domino won nearly $175,000 that year, and his winnings and the fact that it was "ready money" assisted Mr. Keene in many a venture in Wall street. He was so grateful that when Domino died on the farm he had a granite shaft, suitably inscribed with the horse's great deeds, placed over the grave.

It is because Mr. Keene is an Englishman born and bred that each season he nominates many of the colts and fillies in the classic events abroad. In the many years that he has raced in Europe his horses have won such important events as The Oaks, Grand Prix de Paris, Cesarewitch, Cambridgeshire, Bedford, Select and Grand Duke Michael and Ascot Gold Cup, but he has yet to win the Epsom Derby, which he has tried for many times.

In this country he has won the Futurity three times, the Suburban once, the Brooklyn Handicap five times and the Brighton Handicap twice. His record in the other great races compares favorably with all his opponents.

William Lakeland looked after Mr. Keene's horses during the period Domino swept everything before him, but in 1905 James Rowe took charge of his stable and has been in his employ ever since. It was under Rowe's care and attention that Commando, Sysonby, Colin, Celt, Ballot and Peter Pan earned their great laurels and fame.

LONGBOAT CASE CAUSES ROW

While it has been generally thought there would be nothing more heard or done in the case of Tom Longboat, the Indian who was allowed to compete in the Marathon race at the Olympic games in London, notwithstanding the fact that he had been declared a professional by the governing organization of amateur athletics in this country, it became known yesterday that the officials of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States are seriously considering the matter of severing all relations with the Amateur Athletic Union of England, which was chiefly responsible for Longboat's appearance in that race, and if the present feelings of some of the A. A. U. members do not undergo a change by the time the Board of Governors has its annual meeting in November, all athletic ties between the two countries will be discontinued.

The discourtesies shown to the American committee at the Olympic games have nothing to do with this latest move of the A. A. U. officials, the running of Longboat alone in the famous race that John J. Hayes won being the sole cause.

GARRELLS TO TURN PRO?

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 19.—Among the star college football players who may be brought to this city for an all-star professional team now proposed is Garrells, the famous Michigan fullback.

Among other men from whom inquiries have been received by the promoters are Bombay, the former Carlisle star; J. Wilson Blair, A. B. Walker, Farmer Quinlan, Howard Tensel and J. H. McChesnie. Paul Jones, former star fullback of the Michigan team, will be one of the coaches and may possibly play with the team.

A GOOD RACE WINNER.

Vesta Boy, 2:05½, made quite a record in winning four races in six days at different towns, and he kept up the good work by beating Jennie W., 2:04¾, at Nashua.

CAPRON WILL JOIN GIANTS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 19.—George Capron, Minnesota's great football drop kicker, to-day admitted the truth of the charges that he played professional baseball this Summer with the Meridian team of the Cotton States League. Capron's resignation as captain of the 1908 Minnesota eleven followed these charges. Capron says he has been drafted by the New York National League team. Under the name of George Rapp he made a brilliant record with the Meridian team.

BASEBALL NOTES.

With the passing of Billy Keeler goes one of the best batting eyes that ever looked toward the box. Willie was sometimes fooled by the good ones, but who ever saw him offer at a bad one?

Next to the Circus Maximus of Rome—and it has been out of commission some few hundred years—the enlarged stands at the Polo Grounds form the most sweeping amphitheatre to be found anywhere.

If the New Yorks and Detroits play off for the world's championship a pleasing feature will be that spit ball pitchers will be very much in the background. There is none on the New York team, and the Tigers go in very little for the damp delivery.

So George Tebeau is going to call President O'Brien to account for canning Monte Cross. What, for not canning him earlier in the season!

Hoblitzel is not a new brew of imported beer, but the first baseman of the Cincinnati team.

Wright's aeroplane stayed up in the air 62 minutes and 15 seconds in a recent test. That's nothing. The New York Americans held first place in the pennant race longer than that earlier in the season.

Magee, of the Phillies, fell out of a third-story window while laboring under a terrible hallucination. He really dreamt that Murray's team was going to win the N. L. pennant.

BROOKLINE BOYS SHOW UP WELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The senior championship of the A. A. U. will be held at Travers Island to-day. The Brookline gymnasium track team covered itself with glory in the junior track field championships, finishing third in the list, with eleven points.

M. T. Morris captured the one mile run in the fast time of 4:32, defeating two crack New York A. C. runners in handy fashion. H. B. Hill of the Brookline team won the other first place for the Brookline team, taking the sixteen-pound shot put with a put of almost forty-four feet. In the half-mile run O. F. Hedlund of the Brookline team against one of the fastest pair ever seen in the event, finished third.

Harry Kersberg, the former Harvard athlete, and B. F. Sherman of Harvard, took the first two places in the sixteen-pound hammer throw. R. G. Cloughen of the Irish-American A. C., one of the most promising sprinters in the world, captured the dash in 10 1-5 seconds against a fast field.

Jimmy Lee of the B. A. A., in one of the best races of the day was just nosed out of first place in the five-mile run by M. Driscoll of New York.

SILIKO WINS THE EUROPEAN CHAMPIONSHIP

Siliko won the championship of Europe at Faenza, Italy, and lowered Kirkwood, Jr.'s, record, 2:12¼, for the track, trotting a heat in 2:11 1-10. For lowering the record he received a medal extra. Now Mr. Pennock has won both championships of Europe, the first with Leon, the second with Siliko. In a letter Mr. Pennock wrote after the race he said:

"In all my thirty years' racing I never saw people so race mad as here. They had boomed Siliko all over Italy, and people came here that never went to a race before. It is a half-mile track, with flat turns and very rough, which made it hard to get around. The race was for the championship of Italy. In the first heat Siliko made a break, but the next two he won very easily. After the race the spectators fairly went wild over Siliko. They rushed out on to the track and hugged, and some of them even kissed him. When I could get clear I drove over on to the back stretch and then they rushed over there and did the same thing over again. Siliko is very good now, and, I think, can trot a good half-mile track in 2:08."

Summary of the race:

August 29—Championship of Italy or Southern Europe, 10,000 lire.

Siliko, br. h., by Moko—Silicon, 2:13½ (Pennock)	3	1	1
Fanny P., bl. m., by My Build	1	4	4
Onward Silver, ch. h., by Onward (G. Rossi)	4	2	2
Grattan Belle, br. h., by Grattan Boy (Barbetta)	2	3	3

TRAVERS WILL MEET BEHR

GARDEN CITY, Sept. 19.—Jerome D. Travers, Montclair, N. J., and Max Behr of the Morris County Club in the same State, will meet in a twenty-six-hole final match round to-day in the final round of the United States Golf Association's tournament for the national amateur championship.

FITZ TO MEET LUMBER JACKS

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Arrangements were perfected here to-day whereby Bob Fitzsimmons, the former world's champion, will next Monday night attempt to defeat in the ring two lumber jacks of the North woods. The bouts will take place at Benson's Mine, located in the backwoods section, sixty miles from here.

OWNS THE ONLY FILLY.

Luck Simmons (2:17¾), one-time holder of the Narragansett half-mile track record of 1.05¾, has a filly by Lord Dillon, the property of Patrick Burke of Providence, host at the Georgiaville Hotel for many years. This is probably the only living foal of Lord Dillon, as he was gelded last October.

Detroit's position at the head of the American League race is undermined. The Cleveland Naps are now but one game away, and a couple of more reverses for the Tigers, with the Naps winning, will change the leadership.

It took the lowly New York Highlanders to knock the Tigers off their perch, and Detroit was never so insecure in its lead. The Naps managed to nose out the Red Sox again and thereby crawl so close to the Tigers, but its the Red Sox' turn to win to-day, after losing two straight, and the Tigers are not likely to fall before the Highlanders right away, so the situation may be changed again by nightfall.

Chicago by winning held its berth in third position, but the St. Louis came up with a rush by taking a double-header from the Athletics and are now only a game and a half away from the White Sox.

As a result of that double bumping to the Athletics the Red Sox went up into fifth place, and though the margin is small, by a little fighting they should be able to hang onto it.

There is hardly any doubt now that the Giants have got the National pennant cinched and only the worst kind of a slump could deny them of the bunting, as they set the Pirates back a couple of games in the double-header yesterday and by so doing let the Chicago Cubs up into second place in spite of the Phillies putting over a victory on the world's champions.

PARADE FILMS SHOWN AT HUB

An entirely new method of settling arguments and even bets is found in moving pictures. The latest instance of this concerns the recent Labor Day parade in Boston.

Various unions vied with one another to make the best showing, not only in numbers, but also in appearance of men and in novelty designs, like floats and other parade accessories.

These arguments are now being referred to the moving pictures of the parade. The moving picture machines took every detail of the parade faithfully, showing not only the appearance of the men, but the manner in which they marched.

Moving pictures of Boston's parade were taken by Miles Brothers of New York and were shown in this city at the Hub Theatre the latter part of last week. They made such a hit that they were put on again this week and are now being shown to interested audiences.

In addition to the parade films there are interesting slides showing the local union officers.

WILL FIGHT FOR BROWN RICHES

IPSWICH, Sept. 19.—Following the news that the late John Burnham Brown, railroad magnate and multi-millionaire, provided in his will for a $1,000,000 educational institution in this town for young men wishing to enter the railroading business, comes the report that his relatives will contest the bequest.

Allan W. Brown, a half-brother of the deceased, is a teamster, living on the outskirts of the town, and is not in even a prosperous condition. By the terms of the will he will receive $5,000 of the estate. This is one-fourth the amount that his brother and sisters will get.

It is thought that if proceedings to break the will are started Mr. Brown will be the dominant power in the contention.

DESIRABLE HOUSE LOTS MOST IMPORTANT LOCATION

Particulars, terms, plans, ATWOOD & PATTEE, Boston, 27 School st., tel. Main 1322.

WOULD YOU? I WOULD

LIVE in a shanty rather than pay rent. That is the way I got my start. A storekeeper gave me some old boxes, with which I built a shack. In this I lived two years and saved $100. Have sold $100,000 worth of lots; at Norroway lake, Randolph, I virtually give the land. If you build, you pay when convenient; otherwise $1 week, not as much as the rent of lots there; you can build a house for $50 upward, and save your rent and save your lives by getting out of the city, out among the trees and flowers. Half acre farms, $100, $2 down, $1 a week; bungalow lots, $10. 28 houses built, $25 bonus to certain builders. Free excursion Sunday at 11. BARTLETT, 80 Court st.

3 ACRE ESTATE.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 19, 1908

One Man That Succeeded, and Why

His Name Is Frederick Thompson; He Does Something for Others as Well as for Himself

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

This is not an editorial about Lincoln, or Napoleon, or John Brown or Harper's Ferry, or Blind Tom, or any of the other much-written-about gentlemen.

It is an article about Frederick Thompson, and it was written because Frederick Thompson, having himself succeeded, has shown all through this Summer a desire to help others, boys as poor as he once was.

He has used some of the money and influence that he has accumulated to give happiness to those less fortunate. And as he does that, we are very glad to be able to say that he is a thoroughly successful man, and to tell you briefly the story of his success, which is typically American and typically rapid.

Frederick Thompson thought he would be an artist. And in the Art Students' League of New York, he tried that. That was only eight years ago. He didn't have eight dollars at that time, but he had an idea—one idea is worth more than eight dollars, if you can realize it.

He found another young man with energy named Dundy, and the idea, "A Trip To The Moon," was made real at the Buffalo Exposition in 1901. Thompson and his partner made sixty thousand dollars on that very speedily. Thompson concluded that this isn't an age of art, and the Art Students' League saw him no more.

With the money from the "Trip To The Moon," and with the credit that is not lacking to men who succeed and work, Thompson built Luna Park, the classic resort, which is about to close for the season at Coney Island, New York.

He and his partner spent every penny they had in the preliminaries. They borrowed a million; they opened their show just as their credit gave out, and as all the old showmen were cheerfully predicting disaster.

The night of their opening these two men had, between them, twenty-two dollars. They couldn't change any bills. They let in the first comers free.

In four months Luna Park paid what it cost—another triumph for the art student who had abandoned art.

That was 1903. Two years later Thompson and Dundy built and operated the great Hippodrome in New York, withdrawing from it after two years of successful management.

There is no particular moral to the typical American career of Frederick Thompson, except the usual one "Work hard and don't be afraid to take risks in backing your judgment."

Thompson, at present, has several million dollars worth of highly productive property. He has whatever he wants that money can get—yachts and houses and automobiles that make a loud noise, and horses that lift their front knees up high in the air.

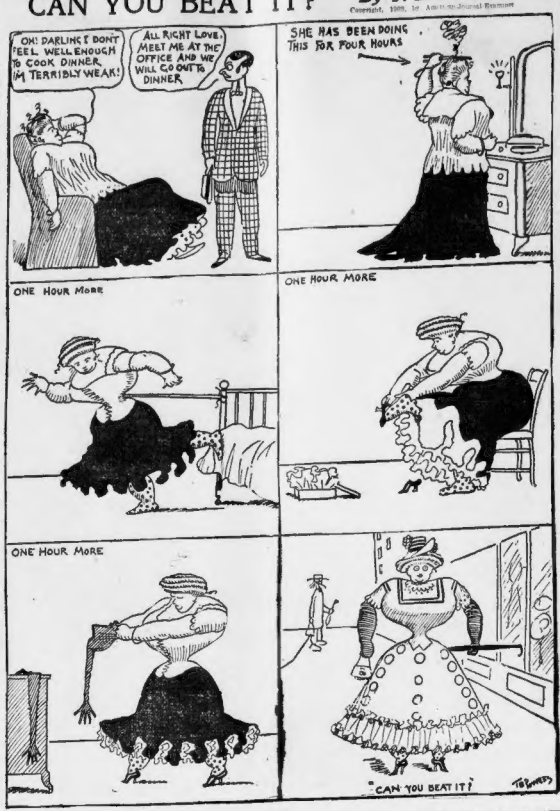

He also has something else, and that something else accounts for the writing of this article. He has the gratitude of poor boys whom he has entertained every week during this Summer. His own success hasn't made him forget old days when pleasure was scarce and life was hard.

It is a pleasure to thank him publicly on behalf of thousands of boys for whom he has made the Summer one long to be remembered, and to express their unanimous opinion that he ought to have more yachts, more horses and more Luna Parks than anybody else in the world.

A Friendly Estimate

By James J. Montague

Effie Donovan, the boxing instructor, is going to write a biography of Mr. Roosevelt. Jacob A. Riis has already written one. We give herewith what we believe to be the first accurate composite of both.

Jake— T. R. is quite the mightiest man in all this wondrous land.
Mike— When he is right he always has a punch in either hand.

Jake— Beside him any other man looks like a pie-faced mutt.
Mike— He's got an awful wallop and a deadly uppercut.

Jake— He has it on Apollo in the line of fancy looks.
Mike— He don't come through with jolts so much, but dodge his jabs and hooks.

Jake— In literature he's surely got both Keats and Shakespeare skinned.
Mike— And yet he couldn't last ten rounds—he hasn't got the wind.

Jake— He makes himself just what he is; he don't depend on luck.
Mike— I'd never land on him at all, if he would learn to duck.

Jake— Upon the loftiest peaks of fame and history he'll mount.
Mike— I've never seen him to a scrap lay down and take the count.

Jake— He stands the lofty bulwark of the nation's highest hopes.
Mike— I've seen him put a classier man right out across the ropes.

Jake— He's first in peace, he's first in war; the great Canal he dug.
Mike— Too bad he didn't get in right—he'd ought of been a "pug."

You will find by the above table that out of twenty-six Presidents twenty-one practised law, if you count Roosevelt, who studied it, but I don't think ever practised one, and seven soldiers and one, Andrew Johnson, went from the tailoring business into politics. James Monroe and William McKinley, after leaving the army, became lawyers, while Andrew Jackson and James A. Garfield went from the law into the army. In fact, all the Presidents, with the exception of Andrew Johnson, were lawyers, or soldiers, or both.

The Vice-Presidential table shows twenty-two lawyers, counting Roosevelt, and four non-lawyers—Elbridge Gerry, merchant; Andrew Johnson, tailor and politician; Henry Wilson, shoemaker and editor, and Levi Morton, banker.

Vice-Presidential Candidate Sherman, in a speech some time ago, said that the people ruled. Judging from above, they only think they do, as apparently the fraternalism and solidarity of interests of the legal profession benevolently do that for them.

Now, on the other hand, you will see that the Independence party have nominated two men who are neither lawyers nor soldiers. Mr. Hisgen is a business man, whose record of achievement is well known. Mr. Graves is a journalist of national importance.

As the legal profession has the vast patronage of the courts as their legitimate privilege, why should they deem it as one of their prerogatives to monopolise all the offices that are within the gift of the people's franchise?

To tabulate here the profession of each member of both branches of Congress would take too much space. A little investigation will show that more than ninety per cent. are lawyers.

Perhaps an editorial comment on my letter would help somewhat to open the eyes of the American Gulliver, who has been pretty well blinded by the subtlety of the legal Lilliputians, who more often prey on than help the industrial world in its endeavors in develop the wealth that is so essential to the happiness of all mankind. Why can't the lawyers and the soldiers for a change give some one else a chance? It is up to the voters to decide. Perhaps conditions would then become better. The men who have made the jobs surely can rule better than the men who seek the "bobs" (money). Respectfully,

G. L. ROBERTSON.

The Unnatural Conflict

Victory in Sight in the War Against Hunger, Ugliness and Disease if Man Ceased Fighting His Fellow Man

By CHARLES FERGUSON

THE shortest definition of barbarism is that it is the struggle of man against man for a bare footing on the earth. And the shortest definition of civilization is that it is the association of men for the mastery of natural forces. A nation may be said to be half civilized when half of its human will power is directed to the conquest of nature, and only half is wasted in conflict. As things stand in this country, we have nowhere near reached the half-civilized stage. For very much more than half of our energy is still wasted in trying to get the better of one another.

One of the greatest living architects—Louis H. Sullivan, the builder of the Chicago Auditorium and the Transportation Building at the World's Fair—said in a public address the other day that more than 99 per cent. of the creative force of Americans is being wasted in the deadly struggle of man against man for money power.

Whether or not this is an over-statement, no thoughtful man with his mind set upon the constructive problems of civilization will deny that we are wasting more mind-power than we are making good use of. If one hesitates to admit that, it is because he has never seriously thought about it.

How Is It with You?

TEST your own case and poll your neighborhood on the subject. Bear in mind that all wealth is created by human will power—that is, by the will to do really useful things. It is a matter of economising emotional energy or painstaking interest. We deceive ourselves if we suppose for a moment that there is any magic by which careless and thoughtless muscle can make wealth, or that any alchemy can transmute greed into gold. Under our unhappy economic conditions greed may indeed reach out its empty, fruitless hand and take possession of the gold that painstaking workers have produced. But greed cannot produce gold—or any other useful thing.

Consider, then, your own case. What proportion of your emotional force—your power to take care about things and take pains—is spent day by day in the great common human struggle to master materials? And then consider, on the other hand, what percentage is wasted in senseless drudgery, in mere fooling, or in a socially useless effort to get money from other people, without caring whether your occupation is useful or not. When you have asked earnest questions of yourself and your acquaintances, you will certainly decide that a much higher voltage of will power goes into the struggle of man against man than into that against hunger, ugliness and disease.

Is This Waste Natural?

PERHAPS you think it is natural for men to waste themselves in this way; that we shall have to sprout wings before we can take a real interest in being useful. That is a common mistake. But the fact is that the wasteful, man-baiting struggle is wholly unnatural and has been brought about by mental sickness—by superstition and by fear. The passion to subdue the earth and conquer the natural difficulties of existence is the primary passion of the human heart.

Go into any good modern school of craftsmanship and see how absorbed the boys and girls are in their work, how delighted they are just to get the thing done right.

The other day I was let into a convention of physicians—eye and ear specialists—who were forgetting to make money in their eagerness to tell one another all their inventions and discoveries for the healing of the deaf and blind.

"Perhaps," said one of them in answer to my question as we went out, "men in this business are more ready than some others to share their trade secrets and make common cause—because we are closer to the presence of our common enemy, disease."

One day a hungry fellow entered the office of P. T. Barnum at his old museum in New York hand begged for employment of any kind. Mr. Barnum hired him at a dollar and a half a day; and he went gladly to work carrying a big pile of bricks from one side of the street to the other. At noon he reported at the office that the job was done. The whimsical showman then told him to spend the afternoon carrying the bricks back again. And the man turned with indignation, refused pay for what he had done and went away. For it is more natural to go hungry than to spend one's time uselessly for money.

Party of Civilization

WE never shall pass from our faintly mitigated barbarism to the solid ground of civilization until we organize a political party in every American community to do battle against hunger, ugliness and disease. The old political parties are barbarous. They organize masses of men to struggle for power over one another. They have no idea of bringing together the sensible people in American towns—to abolish slums and ugliness and to create the general material conditions of beauty and health. They have not even thought of that.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.
